Modified reclamation rules in works

PULLMAN, Wash. (UPI) — Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus says changes will be made in proposed regulations to enforce a 1902 reclamation law.

The proposed rules would have required the breakup of large corporate farms in the West, including prime California farmland in the Imperial Valley and Westlands Water District.

Andrus told a meeting in Great Falls, Mont., Wednesday that the final regulations would have a residency requirement — but might not apply to farmers who retire to areas away from their property.

"My personal opinion is that the person who broke that land down and then got to retirement age — and maybe they live in Arizona now, where it's not quite as cold as it is in northern Montana — there ought to be a hardship provision to permit those people to continue owning their land.

"I think a hardship provision should be incorporated in the proposed regulations — residency is important."

Andrus, who also discussed the issue later in Pullman, said the proposed amendments to the 1902 act which President Carter plans to send to Congress this session probably will have a broader interpretation of family association than the original rules.

The original rules would have been based on direct lineage, where a farmer, his wife, children and grandchildren each would be able to own 160 acres and lease an additional 160 acres.

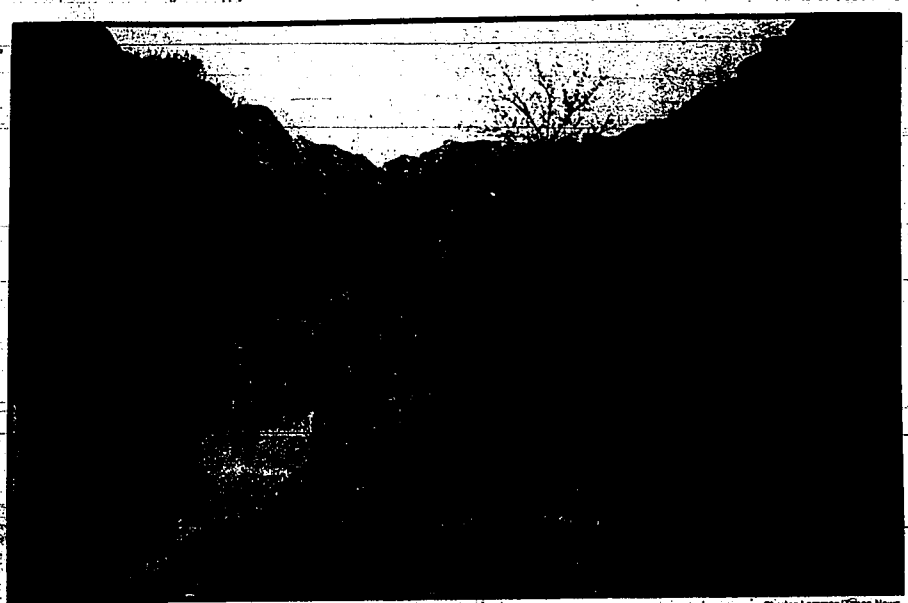

But Andrus said, "Maybe we have to look to brothers and sisters."

"If you are a true family farmer I think you will be content with the final outcome. If you are a large agribusiness, I don't think you will be happy."

At the meeting in Montana, other speakers supported Andrus' proposal to restrict the size of farms receiving water from federal irrigation projects to the 1902 limits. However, Andrus said the president's proposed amendments would also consider the problem of "equivalency." He explained that some areas, such as those in California, receiving water from federal projects have 160 acres that are productive all year round and have top quality soil.

But other areas receiving water from federal projects might be located high above sea level and with poor soil and capable of producing only one crop a year.

Andrus said the "concept" of giving federal tax dollars for irrigation projects to family farmers "is just as effective today as it was in '02."

Idahoans scan Mondale, party

By KEN HODGE
Times-News writer

PULLMAN, Wash. — Lewiston got a good look at all the trappings of vice-presidential travel Wednesday evening as Walter Mondale came to town.

The entourage which the vice president brought in tow include a bevy of secret service agents, a flock of reporters and U.S. Secretary of Interior Cecil Andrus.

Today, the group packed its bags and headed on to Pullman where the vice president and interior secretary saw a demonstration of wheat breeding at Washington State University.

All of the elaborate planning which goes into a trip of this nature cannot take everything into account, though, as reporters learned when the Monday party arrived an hour late at Lewiston due to bad weather along the route.

The delay left more than 100 reporters and other media representatives stomping their feet too keep warm in an empty airplane hanger.

Doing his best to keep warm alongside them was Idaho Gov. John Evans who, despite his gubernatorial status, got cold like everyone else. He passed the time giving informal interviews to the press people milling about.

During the informal interviews, Evans confirmed to reporters that Secretary of Agriculture Bob Bergland has accepted an invitation to appear in Boise Jan. 18 to meet with farmers, ranchers and other Northwest governors to hear their positions on the pending farm strike. Evans reiterated his sympathy for the farm strike.

When Mondale and Andrus finally arrived about 8:45 p.m., they were first ushered into a heated waiting room in another part of the hanger as the secret service prepared the way with one final security glance.

When the dignitaries did come into the hanger, they were greeted by a bevy of flash bulbs.

Earlier in the day, a squad of secret service men with tiny earphones plugged into walkie-talkie systems made a sweep of the area with two German Shepherd police dogs trained to sniff out explosives.

Then they sealed the area off to the public allowing no one in except newsmen and other officials who had been cleared by the secret service several days in advance. At the door to the hanger, the agents carefully checked camera bags and looked into camera lenses seeking possible hidden weapons.

When the press conference finally started, Mondale fielded questions from the newsmen, but referred all questions on water rights and the 1902 Reclamation Act to Andrus, his "expert on the subject."

Smiling and winking at friends in the crowd, Andrus confidently told newsmen he foresees revisions in the 1902 act before the regulations which he has published will become law. Andrus assured the crowd, "I have not changed my opinions since I left Idaho."

While Mondale fielded questions, Andrus reached a hand to pat Evans on the shoulder in a gesture of friendship.

Today Mondale came to eastern Washington's grain farming country with a message to farmers that the administration has no magic wand it can use to instantly raise farm prices.

"We know of no magic wand that can automatically, overnight improve farm prices in a stable way," Mondale said.

The vice president, confronted earlier by angry farmers in Colorado and Montana, was also expected to be greeted by a delegation of farm strikers in Pullman.

He has defended the administration farm bill as "the most expensive in American history."

"But we don't claim to have solved the income problems of the American farmer," Mondale said. "We claim we're doing the best we can and we hope we can do some more."

He blamed the Ford administration for allowing surpluses to increase and prices to fall while vetoing a farm bill passed by the Democratic Congress.

"We are working off that headache," Mondale said.

On Wednesday, farm strikers greeted Mondale and two Cabinet secretaries with signs reading "Carter's comedy team" and "Go home, three stooges."

Joyce Robinson, of Teton County, Mont., called the administration farm bill, "at best planned poverty and at worst suicide."

Goat points way

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — Portland police definitely got the goat of a couple of teen-age burglary suspects.

Officer Robert Colyer responded Wednesday to a call of a burglary in a residential area and arrived in time to see "two kids and a dog" race away from a house and across a yard, a department spokesman said.

His call for help was answered by officer Robert Tilley, who spotted the three and gave chase on foot across a field. He finally caught up with the "dog" and found he had captured a goat.

There were no boys in sight. Then Tilley noticed the goat staring at a bush. The bush was hiding a boy. Tilley collared the youth and took him to the prowl car.

The goat was staring at another bush. There was another boy.

The boys, age 16 and 17, were turned over to juvenile authorities.

Rain stirs allergies

MADISON, Wis. (UPI) — A farmer's wife tearfully told state legislators Wednesday that rainmaking aggravated her daughter's health problems and provoked angry reactions from neighbors who urged her family to "move to another country."

"It's not easy when you have four children, a family and a farm to just pick up and leave," Mrs. Donald Cummings, of Reedsville, Wis., said Wednesday.

Her soft voice quivering, Mrs. Cummings testified in favor of a bill that would ban weather modification systems — rainmaking — in Wisconsin.

"I've never done anything like this before," she said. "I'm nervous. But I felt I had to come here on behalf of my daughter."

Mrs. Cummings said her daughter Kelly, 11, had allergy problems since she was three, but they had cleared up. An Iowa doctor who treated Kelly warned that silver iodide — used in making rain — could cause problems, she said.

She said none of the family was aware of the seedings that caused rain one day last July when Kelly, who was playing outside in a swimsuit, came into the house with her eyes swollen. The next day Mrs. Cummings learned the clouds had been seeded.

The family's increasing opposition to cloud seeding began causing problems with neighbors who favored the project.

"We had people say we should lock our daughter in a motel room for six months," she said, her voice shaking. "Some told us we should move to another country."

Most of those at the hearing favored cloud seeding, citing an increase in rain at crucial times for farmers. They discounted adverse effects to humans, livestock or the land.

"If we felt it would hurt the people or the environment, we wouldn't mess around with it," said Dan Stangel, a director of the Shower Power Co-op, a group of farmers who banded together to finance last summer's cloud seeding.

Jack C. Norman, a chemist from the University of Wisconsin-Green Bay, said his preliminary results showed the seedings did not appreciably add to the residual silver content of the soil and water of the area.

Norman said the buildup in drinking water from silver iodide seeding is generally about the amount "you would get when you stir your coffee with a silver spoon."

'Are you over your head in debt?' — 8

Protection in answers

If you're among the one out of 20 Americans in debt way over your head in this first month of '78, take some comfort (cold though it may be) from the assurance that you can stop it, control it, avoid it in the future. And these 10 guides will show you how:

SYLVIA PORTER

(1) Ask yourself a few simple — but profound — questions that will force answers which in themselves will protect you. For instance:

Do I really need this item or even want it? Will what I'm buying outlast the monthly payments I'll have to make for it? Do I understand every provision in any credit or loan agreement before I sign it, particularly the precise interest I'm being charged? And can I honestly afford this?

(2) Learn how to say no. Whether it be a banker, salesman, any other creditor, say no to the offer — if you decide any of the above questions hasn't been answered fully and to your satisfaction. Saying no doesn't cost a dime — but it can save you countless dollars.

(3) Teach yourself how to live within a budget. A real working budget is about the best protection you can devise for yourself. Make that budget so realistic and so comfortable you can even wipe out of your conscious mind that it is governing you.

(4) Grasp the concepts of credit and how credit can work best for you and your needs — whether it be a plastic card or loan agreement, your monthly rent or phone bill. Don't view it as an extension of your paycheck to be repaid when you can. It doesn't work that way.

(5) Be on guard against your own weakness. If, for instance, you run to the stores and tend to charge recklessly whenever you have an argument with your spouse, guard against this weakness by leaving your credit cards at home and carrying only a minimal amount of cash with you on that day.

COLORADO FARMERS SURROUND VICE PRESIDENT
... Mondale discusses problems at Grand Junction stop

Easing fear Mondale aim

PULLMAN, Wash. (UPI) — Vice president Walter Mondale is attempting to dispel fears that the administration is waging a war on the West by shaking hands with Utah businesswoman, Colorado farmers and Washington students — each time repeating the message that the administration is not trying to take away state water rights.

"Water is the lifeblood of the arid west," said former Colorado Governor John Vanderhoof during a town meeting in Grand Junction, Colo.

Mondale replied, "We will not interfere with or pre-empt state water rights. President Carter is very influential in federal government and he is not going to do it."

But Interior Secretary, Cecil Andrus, accompanying Mondale on a five-day trip to seven western states, urged Colorado citizens concerned about water problems to seek answers with their state's legislature.

"We think water problems should be resolved at the state level. You people should urge state legislators to solve these problems so the feds don't have to stick their nose in it," Andrus said.

Colorado Governor Richard Lamm told Mondale "we appreciate your reassurance" that there will be no move to create federal water rights.

But Lamm, one of several western Democratic governors up for re-election this fall, reportedly later indicated he will seek to separate himself from Carter's policies during his re-eelection campaign next fall.

Hearing promised on power siting bill

BOISE (UPI)— An early public hearing on power siting legislation was promised Wednesday by the Senate State Affairs Committee.

Senate President Pro-Tem Phil Batt, R-Wilder, a committee member, said some amendments are being proposed to the measure which he is sponsoring, and hearings should be held.

But Batt said he felt it would be better to hold a one evening hearing at the earliest possible date instead of "piecemealing it every day and get it over with."

Batt suggested a hearing be scheduled within a week and Chairman Leon Swenson, R-Nampa, said he would do everything possible to schedule the earliest possible date.

The legislation is similar to one introduced by Batt late in the last session. It passed the Senate, but died in the final hours in the House.

Senate State Affairs members discussed for more than an hour-and-a-half numerous prefiled measures, but sent only one to the floor. They gave a do-pass recommendation to a bill which would allow handicapped persons to vote outside of polling places.

Held by the committee was a measure to get a handle on applications by state agencies for federal funds. Committee members decided to hold the legislation, sponsored by Sen. Dane Watkins, R-Idaho Falls, because several bills on the same subject were being prepared.

They also held a "Sunset" measure drafted by Watkins. It would provide for review of regulatory agencies every five years to see if there was justification for keeping them. The committee felt that this was a duplication and if an agency was not performing, it could be knocked out of existence by withholding funding.

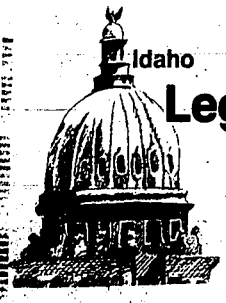

Meantime, House taxwriters refused to listen to the recommendation of Gov. John V. Evans that the store license tax be repealed. Instead, they voted to raise the license fee to $10 from $6.

Evans proposed repeal of the tax, contending revenue it raised did not justify collection of the levy. But the tax commission felt it should be boosted to bring in an additional $68,000 for the state's publicity and development fund.

Both houses separately heard an address by U.S. Sen. James McClure, who told the lawmakers energy demands from east of the Rocky Mountains have created a new threat to diversion of Idaho water.

McClure said the threat from the Southwest still is very real. He mentioned specifically a recent resolution by the Los Angeles County Board of Supervisors which is directed at diverting Snake River water at Hagerman.

But, he said, there also is a threat from the East as well. He said the demand for new energy sources will require large amounts of water for coal slurrying and other purposes and the Upper Snake River already is being studied as a possible source.

Property tax relief bills expected to flood panel

BOISE (UPI) — Chairman Lyle Cobbs of the Senate Local Government and Taxation Committee said Wednesday he expected the Legislature to be "bombarded" with bills to provide property tax relief.

"There are 105 legislators and there appear to be 105 bills for property tax reduction," he said the initial meeting of his committee.

Cobbs said there was a general consensus among the population of the state for some type of property tax relief.

Asked to comment on tax feelings in their areas, two of the committee members said there was support in their districts for a 1 cent increase in the sales tax to reduce the property tax load.

Both Sens. Pearl Crystal, R-Idaho Falls, and James A. Leese, D-Pocatello, said they had heard some talk from their constituents about raising the sales tax to offset rising property tax increases.

Crystal said in a tour of his district, the sales tax proposal was the one heard most. He said people want a 1 cent increase and a reduction in the amount in property taxes by putting the money into the school equalization formula.

Leese said the voters in his area feel that the sales tax probably would be a good way to go.

But Sen. Dorothy McCann, D-Wallace, said there would be a loud scream in her area against any sales tax increase.

Sen. Michael Black, D-Craigmont, said there was a minor tax revolt in the Nez Perce area of his district. He said the farmers were upset with property tax increases in the face of depressed market conditions.

He said many of the farmers were refusing to pay their property taxes.

At one meeting attended by 100 people, Black said, 50 raised their hands when asked if they were going to refuse to pay the property tax.

Black also said that there was a growing interest in a local option tax if it were tied into property tax reduction.

Floyd Decker, executive director of the Association of Idaho Cities, said his group was committed to working with the Legislature in finding a genuine way to provide property tax relief.

He outlines four association principals:

—Actual roll back of property tax at the local level.

—Relief that does not hinder economic growth.

—Property tax relief that does not "gut" the reappraisal program.

—Property tax relief that is fair and equitable.

Don Rollie of the Idaho Education Association told the committee he hoped the Legislature would not tinker with the 8-mill school levy. He said it was the best levy for support of education in the state.

House Republicans already had indicated a bill will be introduced to do away with the 8-mill levy.

New water threat grows

BOISE (UPI) — Energy demands from east of the Rocky Mountains have created a new threat to diversion of Idaho water, Sen. James A. McClure told the 44th Legislature Wednesday.

Speaking separately to the two houses, McClure said the threat from the Southwest still is very real. He mentioned specifically a recent resolution by the Los Angeles County Board of Supervisors which is directed at diverting Snake River water at Hagerman.

But, he said, there also is a threat from the East as well. He said the demand for new energy sources will require large amounts of water for coal slurrying and other purposes and the Upper Snake River already is being studied as a possible source.

McClure, who served three terms in the Idaho Senate before he was elected to the first of his three terms in the U.S. House of Representatives, said many of the problems confronting lawmakers 17 years ago still are with them. Water diversion threats, he said, are among them.

But, he said, some new problems confront the Idaho Legislature which did not exist back in 1961. These include population and industrial growth in the state and particularly in the Boise Valley. He noted that Boise is the fourth fastest growing city in the nation.

The Idaho senator stressed that, in coping with these problems, he wants to see the decisions made in Idaho and by Idahoans and not by people living elsewhere or by federal agencies.

Revenue loss major worry

BOISE (UPI) — Sen. Dick High, R-Twin Falls, co-chairman of the Joint Finance-Appropriations Committee, said Wednesday it is hard to say at this point where the Legislature could come up with $9 million in additional revenue if the 8-mill school levy was eliminated.

"It would mean going through the budgets very carefully and probably eliminating new programs and new personnel," High said. "There's really no way now to tell where we would get the money."

The Revenue Projection Committee has yet to finish its work and there are indications the final revenue figure for Fiscal Year 1979 will be higher than the $319 million estimated by Gov. John V. Evans.

High said the committee would have to see the final revenue figures before it could make any determinations.

PAYETTE, Idaho (UPI) — Magistrate William Jordan has released Keith Anderson, 36, Payette, on $1,000 bond pending further court appearance on a robbery charge resulting from commandeering of a school bus Tuesday night.

Anderson is accused of taking the school bus from driver Lee Reed after Reed had dropped off the high school basketball team and then leading police and sheriff's deputies on a wild chase through town.

By United Press International

The Senate Agriculture Committee chairman says hearings later this month will focus attention on the problems of American agriculture, but strikers already are attracting plenty of notice with blockades of livestock markets and trains.

Sen. Herman Talmadge, D-Ga., said Wednesday Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland would testify in Washington Jan. 24 at the first in a series of hearings to determine "what constructive steps can be taken to help our producers bring demand and supply into balance."

Talmadge, who helped guide a four-year farm bill through Congress last year, said he had no ideas for new legislation but wants to study steps that can be taken under discretionary powers included in the act.

Meanwhile, a judge ordered strikers to lift their blockades which had closed two livestock markets in Michigan and farmers stopped 11 railroad trains in Texas and New Mexico to gain support for their strike but were prevented from driving their tractors on Missouri interstate highways to a scheduled rally in Tennessee.

Strikers placed red flares on railroad tracks west of Cannon Air Force Base, N.M., and halted two Santa Fe freight trains for about 20 minutes. They plastered the engine with signs demanding 100 percent parity, then allowed the train to continue.

Railroad officials knew of the stoppage beforehand and warned the engineers by telephone. There were no incidents and farmers thanked the railroad men for their cooperation.

In Texas, nine different trains were forced to make 11 stops.

"We just told the (the engineers) we were picketing their Santa Fe Railroad," American Agriculture spokesman Tommy Applewhite said. "We tried to get them to get out and eat our sandwiches and drink our coffee, but they didn't. The only purpose we had in stopping these trains was to get the American public a little more to observe the problems of American farmers."

Near Hayti, Mo., farmers blocked an entrance ramp to Interstate 55 for several hours after state police refused to let them drive tractors onto the highway en route to Dyersburg, Tenn. Several Missouri Highway Patrol cars suffered minor injuries when a tractor equipped with a blade shoved them out of the way.

There were no arrests and no violence, but several tickets were issued for traffic violations.

A judge Wednesday issued permanent injunctions preventing strikers from blocking entrance and exit points at two major livestock markets in southwestern Michigan. And Minnesota police escorted three truckloads of Canadian cattle on a 400-mile trip after protestors would not allow the animals to be unloaded at a packing plant in Long Prairie.

Tokyo trade talks bear warnings

TOKYO (UPI) — U.S. envoy Robert Strauss met today with a top Japanese official to work out a truce in the worsening American-Japanese trade war and sources close to the talks said he insisted Tokyo must do more to help resolve the dispute.

Sen. Edward Kennedy, also in Tokyo, warned Japan to be fair to "Yankee traders" or face stiff retaliation from Congress.

Strauss, President Carter's special trade representative, conferred for an hour with Minister for External Economic Affairs Nobuhiko Ushiba.

Officials who briefed Japanese reporters afterward quoted the American as saying: "In order to check the rise of trade protectionism in the United States, I want to see Japan come up with a stronger position."

Progress forecast

HOUSE Speaker Thomas O'Neill said Thursday he thinks the long stalemate will end soon and Congress will send an energy package to the White House in a few weeks.

FBI chief selection near

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The White House plans to put one of two Midwestern lawyers, elevated to the federal bench by Richard Nixon, in charge of the FBI.

A decision between two finalists with similar backgrounds will be made "by the middle of next week," Attorney General Griffin Bell said Wednesday as he shepherded federal appeals court Judge William H. Webster of St. Louis in to see President Carter.

The other contender is Frank J. McGarr, a U.S. District Court judge in Chicago who had his interview with the president Tuesday.

"I would say we're down to two people right now," Bell said, "Judge McGarr and Judge Webster."

It is the administration's second attempt to find a successor for Clarence Kelley, a Nixon appointee who is retiring from the post in February.

The president first selected Frank Johnson, a federal judge in Alabama who built a reputation across the South with civil rights rulings in the early 1960s.

But Johnson underwent major surgery and a slow recovery prompted him to withdraw before Senate confirmation hearings were held.

While Bell said "I don't have any great affinity for judges," it appeared the attorney general, himself a former federal judge, and the president hoped the selection of a jurist would help restore morale at the law enforcement agency.

The FBI has been rocked in recent years by disclosures of illegal activities ranging from break-ins on radicals to misuse of FBI personnel to do chores around the house of the late J. Edgar Hoover.

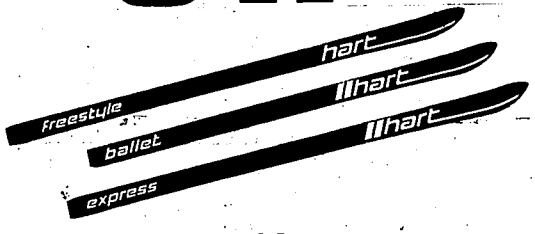

Both the finalists are known by colleagues as no-nonsense judges who broke into federal law enforcement as U.S. attorneys during Republican administrations.

Wendell right not to censor books

Wendell school and church leaders are to be commended for the restraint shown in their response to some parents who found a book in the school's library objectionable.

The book describes the plight of two teenagers forced to struggle with the problems of teenage marriage brought on by unwanted pregnancy.

There followed a knee-jerk reaction which, had not cooler heads prevailed, might have resulted in an unreasonable and unworkable attempt at censorship in the school.

Fortunately, many people in the community were able to look beyond the question of a single book to the much larger issue of freedom of personal choice.

A proposal which could have evolved into a witchhunt and the formation of a "citizens' screening committee" to censor school reading materials died during a long, intense discussion at Monday night's school board meeting.

Many of the 150 persons attending the board meeting were surprised to learn the school district has had a policy since 1975 on book selection which outlines procedures for just this type of situation.

Parents should be concerned about what books their children read. If they find objectionable material, they should be able to complain to school authorities.

Such recourse is central to the concept of local control which has long been a hallmark of American public school systems.

But, as Wendell administrators and librarians pointed out Monday, the final decision must rest with the school board, a group of elected officials who can be voted out of office should their performance warrant it. It should not rest with an arbitrary screening committee.

Many parents struggle with the dilemma of how to protect their children from objectionable literature or entertainment. But the hard fact remains, no one can exist long in an ivory tower. Teaching children moral values and then having faith in their judgment is the only effective way to prepare them to cope with the real world.

Censorship of the nature suggested in Wendell is only an artificial protection which will not carry over throughout their lives.

And we should not forget that throughout history, many of the great literary classics have been censored, judged unfit for human reading. Exposure to a book like the one in Wendell is a small price to pay, indeed, for the freedom to bask in the knowledge and pleasure of the great literary works.

Once censorship begins, drawing the line between the two becomes very difficult.

As the Rev. Francis Horner said at the meeting, citing his years in South Africa where censorship exists at many levels, "I know from bitter experience what censorship can lead to."

Washington hands out excuses

JAMES KILPATRICK

WASHINGTON — Toward the end of August of last year, three gentlemen from Rhodesia applied for visas to enter the United States. On Sept. 23, the State Department effectively denied their applications.

At about the same time, Wilfred Burchett, a notorious Australian Communist, also asked for a visa. He needed a waiver of the law that makes Communists ineligible to enter the country.

Burchett wanted to lecture at various colleges and universities. On Oct. 12, the State Department recommended the waiver and let him in.

On Nov. 21, Reed Irvine, representing Accuracy in Media, attended the daily State Department press briefing. He had the temerity to ask the briefing officer, Hodding Carter, III, how the department could justify a waiver for Burchett.

Mr. Carter responded that Burchett's admission was in accord with the administration's policy of supporting "the freest possible flow of information and people," however much we may disagree with their points of view.

At that moment, Mr. Carter won for himself, and for the department he represents, the furlined, chased silver chamber pot that is given annually in Washington as the Balderdash of the Year Award. The competition for this trophy ordinarily is intense, but with Mr. Carter's virtuoso performance, all opposition collapsed. It was no contest.

A strong stomach is required for this sort of thing. "The freest possible flow of information and people," says Mr. Carter. He says it with a straight face. Yet the State Department cheerfully has joined the United Nations lynch mob that is out to strangle the little Rhodesian Information Service here in Washington. That is a splendid example, is it not, of how Jimmy Carter would encourage the free flow of information? He would cut if off.

And for an example of hypocrisy more directly in point, consider the three gentlemen from Rhodesia. They are respected tribal chiefs, Jeremiah Chirau of the Tshona, Kayisa Ndiweni of the Matabele, and Edgar Muikavanhu, also a Tshona. The first two have served in the Rhodesian Senate, but they hold not part whatever in the Ian Smith government. They are in opposition to that government — so much in opposition that they have made themselves leaders of the Zimbabwe United People's Organization. Their purpose is to take over the government themselves.

In the eyes of the State Department, to be sure, it is hard to find anything good to say of ZUPO, for ZUPO is not radical; it is no violent; its members do not commit murder, arson, or terrorism. The organization is firmly anti-communist. All these things make it suspect. And lest Americans be subjected to such dangerous black conservatism, the department's apostles of the free flow of information trumped up a tricker. They declared the three gentlemen to be representatives of the illegal rebel regime, and slammed the door in their face.

Then, in an incredible action, the department granted the waiver to Wilfred Burchett! Congressman Larry McDonald has placed in the Congressional Record a small dossier on this scoundrel. The New York Post has published a devastating exposure of his record. Burchett is the professional Communist propagandist who worked insidiously on our prisoners of war in Korea and later in Vietnam. He has been identified under oath before the Senate Internal Security Subcommittee as an agent of the Soviet KGB. His record is despicable.

The Jimmy Carter administration, we may faintly recall, is the administration that would never lie to us. Why, then, does the administration dissimulation such matters as these? Come, now: Why were the Rhodesians denied admittance? The honest answer is that the administration is fawning upon the Third World members of the UN; it is trying to hold the black vote here at home; and it feared that by granting a waiver to the Rhodesians, these political forces would be antagonized. That is the truth.

And why was Burchett granted admission? The honest answer is that the administration will go to extraordinary steps to appease the vocal liberals who would have screamed to high heaven if Burchett had been kept out. That is the truth on that point. As our trophy winner has so richly demonstrated, these are not the truths one gets in Washington these days. What we get, sad to say, is the Balderdash of the Year.

"I MISS THE POLISH INTERPRETER!"

Carter hires Polish translator

ART BUCHWALD

WASHINGTON — Although President Carter has pledged himself to cutting down on government, he has just made an exception and authorized the State Department to hire a full-time Polish translator.

It isn't that the President wasn't pleased with the translator the Department provided him with in Warsaw (he even told Mr. Vance he would pray for him), it was just that Mr. Carter feels the United States is not getting its message over in Poland with the part-time help it has on its present payroll.

For those of you who were skiing or scuba diving during the holidays, this is what happened. President Carter arrived in Poland on his first stop abroad and gave a very stirring speech about American-Polish friendship. The American translator had trouble with the President's Georgia accent and told the Polish people that Mr. Carter was abandoning Washington and was lusting after Poland, or something to that effect.

In any case the Polish people, who are sick to death of American-Polish jokes, had their first laugh at our expense in years.

Fortunately no serious damage was done. It could have been much worse for both countries if the translator had remained on duty during the conference.

President: It is a great honor for me to be here in Poland to reaffirm and to strengthen the historic and strong ties of friendship and mutual respect which exist between our two countries.

Translator: I am very happy to be here in a country where someone has stolen the pen of my aunt.

Secretary Gierek: Tell him that Polish people do not steal the pens of peoples' aunts. Ask him if he looked on the dresser next to the door.

Translator: The Secretary says he does not know where the pen of your aunt is, but says he will be very happy to put another quilt on your bed.

President Carter: I do not need another quilt. I wish to have fruitful discussions with the First Secretary concerning bi-lateral questions which involve the SALT talks.

Translator: The President says his soup spoon is dirty and he would like to have another one. He also wishes to thank you for the salt you put on his fruit.

Secretary Gierek: Tell the President the Polish people do not put salt on their fruit, and also that the reduction of armed forces in the Warsaw Pact is based on the reduction of forces in NATO.

Translator: The Secretary wishes to inform you the train will be leaving late. He also does not change travelers' checks, but will take your personal check providing you do not overtip the boatman.

President: Please inform the First Secretary I never overtip, and that my main concern on this trip is to press for human rights, which is still the cornerstone of my foreign policy.

Translator: President Carter says that he is only human and asks if you know of an honest merchant who will sell him a foreign policy he can put in stone on a corner.

Secretary Gierek: It is essential that our countries work together to stop the Arms Race. Inform the President that Poland is willing to do its part to reduce tensions in the world.

Translator: The Secretary says he would like to take off your arms and relieve your tension concerning the loss of the pen of your aunt. He wants to know if you looked under the kitchen table.

President: And in conclusion I wish to say on behalf of Rosalynn and myself I wish to thank you and Mrs. Gierek for your wonderful hospitality shown us, and I desire to visit you and your wife very soon.

Translator: The President says he lusts after your wife and has carnal desires to visit Poland again as soon as he gets the hall porter to bring up his luggage.

U.S. studies defense for Soviet attack

© 1978 Washington Star

WASHINGTON — It would cost the United States between $25 billion and $29 billion to be able to reply promptly to a Soviet missile attack on U.S. land-based missiles by hitting back at remaining Soviet missiles, according to a new study made for Congress.

It would be cheaper to hit back at Soviet cities, the study by the Congressional Budget Office says, but that might invite attack on U.S. cities. The study says an attempt to keep a missile exchange to a "counterforce strategy" would add the $25-29 billion in 1978 dollars between now and the turn of the century.

The study was another contribution on the complex subject of weapons choices. Depending upon what assumptions are cranked into a study, its results can vary greatly. The budget office is supposed to present options to Congress in an objective, impartial manner.

Its study is the first of three being prepared as guidance for long-range congressional decisions on new strategic weapons. The decisions will be affected by the results of negotiations for a new strategic arms limitations treaty, SALT II.

A CBO study made two years ago said a breakdown in SALT talks would be unlikely to change either U.S. or Soviet strategic weapons programs very much. The options then visible — such as keeping open the production line for the main U.S. land-based missile, the Minuteman, and accelerating work on a heavier, mobile missile, the MX — were estimated to add $10.7 billion in 1977 dollars spent over a five-year period.

That $10.7 billion figure contrasted with a warning by the then-secretary of state, Henry A. Kissinger, that failure to achieve SALT II could require the spending of $20 billion over the five years from 1976 to build up U.S. strategic forces. Kissinger never justified this figure, leaving many observers thinking it was an off-the-cuff estimate intended mainly to win domestic support for his SALT negotiations.

A congressional critic of military spending, Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., issued a study Sunday saying that without SALT II the United States would have to spend at least $20 billion to retain strategic parity with the Soviet Union in 1985. Apparently assuming that a new treaty will come out similar to current negotiating positions, Aspin argued that the Senate should ratify it.

The new CBO study considers the question of whether the United States requires weapons that can deter a Soviet attempt to destroy U.S. land-based missiles by striking back at the means to make such an attempt. At present only the Minuteman has the accuracy to hit Soviet missiles.

Nobody can afford to enter hospital

By RUSSELL BAKER
N.Y. Times Service

RUSSELL BAKER

I went to the hospital. The cashier stopped me at the door. "You can't afford to come in here," she said. This was not news. Nobody can afford to go to a hospital anymore. The cost of medical care is so high that the average patient sent to surgery for a tonsillectomy is bankrupt before the doctor can get around to his second tonsil. This is why so many Americans nowadays have one tonsil out and one tonsil in.

I told the cashier I didn't want any medical care, but was just visiting. Visitor's admission was $20, which, as the ticket taker observed, was $5 cheaper than an orchestra seat for Liza Minelli's new musical. The elevator ride was $7, so I used the stairs which cost only $5.

At the top of the climb I was inhaling deeply. Technicians hurried me to an inhalation-testing room where a breath analyzer established that I was inhaling, in addition to air, the odors of floor wax, ether, iodine, toilet disinfectant, gift fruit baskets and adhesive tape.

Floor-wax odor cost me $10; ether, $50; iodine, $25; disinfectant, $20; gift fruit baskets, $15, and adhesive tape $20. The air was free. There was a $100 charge for use of the inhalation-testing room, a $75 charge for use of the breath analyzer, and a $20 charge for the paper on which the bill was written. Naturally, I had to pay by check, having neglected to take out major hospital inhalation coverage.

Two guards restrained me in a corner of the corridor while a nurse phoned the bank to make sure I was not a bad-check artist. I was charged $40 for the guards, $25 for use of the corner, $10 for the telephone call, and $50 for the clean bill of financial health.

I went along the corridor toward the room occupied by my friend, a wealthy entrepreneur who had swallowed a fishbone during an expense-account lunch. For use of the corridor I was charged $50.

Use of the overhead lights in the corridor cost me $20, and use of the heat from the radiators, $30. Since it would have cost $150 to enter my friend's room I stood outside and looked through the open door. Use of the open door for this purpose cost $15.

My friend was not there.

"Where is the man who swallowed the fishbone?" I asked a nurse. "The charge for information is $130," she said with an apologetic smile. The charge for the smile was $25 and the charge for its apologetic character was $40.

By this time my bank balance was so low I was afraid I wouldn't be able to afford an exit. In fact, I would have made a run for the stairs and taken my chances against the accountant and treasurer if at that moment my wealthy friend had not appeared around a corner fully dressed and sobbing.

His story, like the annals of the poor, was short and simple. He had been wiped out, possibly ruined. The fishbone had proved more elusive than the doctors had anticipated. They had been compelled to go into the esophagus, then into the stomach before they removed it.

By that time, however, his bank accounts had been consumed; his insurance exhausted; his airplane, yacht and cars sold at auction; and his estates in Maine, Delaware and Venezuela all lost. Though he had become penniless on the operating table, the hospital had refused to put him out until his incisions had been sewn and had even permitted him to keep the expensive clothes in which he had entered the place.

This, the hospital explained, was in line with medical ethics, for which the charge was $1,500. This friend has always been highly strung and it was not surprising that he broke down and wept in the administration office when told that, though a pauper, he had received the best medical care in the world.

The charge for use of the administration office was $100. The charge for weeping was $150. The administrator said he would waive the $300 charge for breaking down and send the rest of the bill to a collection agency. Escorting us to the door, he presented my friend with a gift from the hospital — a tin cup and a dozen pencils — and a piece of advice.

"Next time, get a divorce," he said, in a humorous vein. "It's cheaper than swallowing fishbones."

The charge for the tin cup was $50; for the pencils, $30; for the advice, $100, and for the humorous vein, which had been transplanted from a patient who had been hounded to death by a collection agency, $15,000.

Dollar skids, gold soars in Europe

LONDON (UPI) — A plague of economic woes sent the sickly dollar plunging further on confused European markets today and some dealers said the worst was yet to come.

Gold, already at its highest rates since May 1975, jumped further.

"Trading is confused and it's difficult to establish a settled trading level," said a London dealer. "Unless the central banks move in later to help the dollar it will begin to take a knocking again on money markets."

Dealers in Frankfurt, London and elsewhere were astonished at Treasury Secretary Michael Blumenthal's statement in Washington Wednesday that last week's decision to prop up the dollar had accomplished its goal.

Another blow was dealt by a renewed hint from Saudi Arabia — the world's biggest oil exporting nation — that it might switch from dollars and peg oil prices to a basket of currencies.

"American currency again shivering with fever," headlined West German financial newspaper Handelsblatt. "The recent dollar recovery proved to be short-lived."

The dollar opened at 2.0872 marks in Frankfurt, down from Wednesday's close of 2.1145. In Zurich it dropped from 1.9785 francs to 1.9335 and in Amsterdam it fell from 2.2660 guilders to 2.2383.

In Brussels it fell from 32.81 francs to 32.29 and in Paris it went from 4.7010 francs to 4.6750.

In Milan the dollar dropped from 872.05 lire to 871.75 and in Tokyo from 241.18 yen to 240. In London the pound jumped from $1.9390 to $1.9585.

Gold jumped in both Zurich and London from $172.375 an ounce to $175.125 — the highest rates in nearly two years. Dealers said the climb was a direct result of of the dollar's weakness.

Another factor in the dollar's fall, analysts said, was the sluggish performance of the U.S. economy in the fourth quarter of 1977 — a development that counteracted news of a sharp drop in unemployment.

Dayan, Pope confer

VATICAN CITY (UPI) — Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan met with Pope Paul VI at the Vatican today for talks on the holy sites of Jerusalem.

The former war hero called on the spiritual leader of 700 million Roman Catholics after visiting the Ardeatine Caves where Nazi S.S. troopers massacred 335 Romans.

Cosmonauts begin tests

MOSCOW (UPI) — Four Soviet cosmonauts whose triumphant double-docking marked a milestone in Soviet space exploration began intensive medical and biological tests today, Moscow radio reported.

Lt. Col. Vladimir Janibekov and civilian engineer Oleg Makarov gingerly edged their Soyuz 27 capsule into a perfect linkup with the Salyut 6 station early Wednesday and joined cosmonauts Lt. Col. Yuri Romanenko and Georgy Grechko who had been inside since Dec. 11.

The four then swapped cherry juice toasts, letters and bear hugs in a party in orbit that had everything but vodka.

It was the first time in history that three spacecraft — the two Soyuz capsules and the space station — have been linked in space.

It also signaled the beginning of what Western experts believe will be a year-round manned space project. Konstantin Feoktistov, a pilot-cosmonaut assigned to the ground control crew, said the dual linkup proved it will be possible to continually resupply cosmonauts living aboard the Salyut.

The Moscow Radio broadcast said the cosmonauts began intensive tests today and would use equipment designed by Soviet and French scientists to gauge the effects of lengthy spaceflight on humans.

It said all four cosmonauts were in good physical condition.

Sinai pullback talks continue

CAIRO, Egypt (UPI) — Egypt and Israel failed to reach agreement today on the future of Jewish settlements in Sinai but said both sides were determined to reach a solution.

"Obviously there is a gap," said Israeli Defense Minister Ezer Weizman, "but we hope to bridge it. We are still talking and this in itself is progress."

Gamassy, who said Wednesday the settlements should be abandoned because they violated Egyptian sovereignty, declared: "The question was discussed yesterday and today and we shall continue to discuss it until we find the means that would achieve the aims of the two sides.

"With determination, persistence and constructive debate, we shall reach results," Gamassy said.

The question of about 20 Jewish settlements along the Mediterranean coast in the Sinai has posed the most difficult problem at the meetings of a joint Egyptian-Israeli military committee which began Wednesday. Another round of talks was scheduled for this evening.

Weizman and Gamassy were briefing the press after a morning session at the two-story Tahra Palace. At one point, Weizman referred to the "extreme difficulties we face," and Gamassy reminded reporters: "You should not think that in two days the problems which accumulated over the years will be solved."

Record gales batter Britain, Europe

LONDON (UPI) — Record gales and severe storms battered low-lying areas of northern Europe today, destroying life and property, stranding hundreds and threatening downtown London with flooding.

At least three people died in road accidents on snow-covered British roads and 12 men were feared lost at sea after the Dutch coastal freighter Holmar and another unidentified ship went down in what were called "atrocious" North Sea conditions.

Gales with gusts up to 90 mph sent waves crashing over dikes in Belgian coastal towns, shipping was disrupted in Dutch, Belgian and French ports. But Britain was hardest hit.

The worst floods since 1953, when 307 people died, swept the east coast during the night with floodwaters up to five feet deep rushing inland. Waves 50 feet high lashed the Kent coast at Deal, near Dover.

In central London the level of the Thames peaked at just 18 inches short of the officially designated "disaster line," which would send floodwaters rampaging through the center of the city.

The London Flood Control center was on alert and said a new crisis could develop at high tide in the afternoon.

"We are keeping our fingers crossed about today's weather," a spokesman at the Control Center said.

But flooding already hit some London suburbs as well as coastal areas.

"There has been tremendous damage. All the low-lying areas of the county have been hit," said a police spokesman in Norfolk.

In the coastal town of Cleethorpes, in Lincolnshire, heavy seas crashed through a wooden pier, stranding some 300 people — including many disabled and children — who had been watching a pantomime show at the pier concert hall.

Flooding in Kent forced the evacuation of hundreds of homes and in one town stranded eight people on the roof of a pub. The heavy gales prevented rescuers from reaching them for more than nine hours.

Father gives innocent plea

ROCKFORD, Ill. (UPI) — Simon Peter Nelson pleaded innocent Wednesday to killing his six children, who were buried a few miles away in a lonely, graveside service.

While Nelson stood before Winnebago County Circuit Judge Philip Rheinhard, only a priest and funeral home employees attended the service for the children, ages 3 to 12.

Nelson, 46, waived a reading of the six-count murder indictment against him, and public defender Craig Peterson then entered a plea of innocent on Nelson's behalf.

Rheinhard ordered Nelson held without bond and set Jan. 18 for a hearing where he will accept pre-trial motions.

Peterson declined comment on whether he will base his defense on a claim of insanity or seek a sanity hearing for his client. Prosecutor Dan Doyle refused to say whether he will seek the death penalty for Nelson.

Nelson was arrested in a Milwaukee hotel Saturday during a fight with his wife, Ann, 37. The Nelsons had separated two days earlier and she reportedly planned to seek a divorce.

Rockford police broke into the Nelson's home and found the mutilated bodies of the children: Jennifer, 12; Simon, 10; Andrew, 9; Matt, 7; Rosie, 5, and David, 3, and the family dog. All had been hacked and slashed with a knife and beaten with a blunt instrument.

Patty remains out of jail

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Patricia Hearst will remain out of jail pending an appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court on her armed bank robbery conviction.

An order staying proceedings in the case was handed down Wednesday in a written statement by the Ninth U.S. Court of Appeals.

The appellate court last week denied a defense petition for a rehearing on the conviction and the 23-year-old newspaper heiress could have been ordered back to jail today.

Miss Hearst's attorney, Al Johnson, said he would file the appeal to the high court by the deadline of Feb. 3.

Miss Hearst has been free on $1.2 million bail since her November 1976 conviction of robbing a San Francisco bank. The robbery occurred six weeks after she was kidnapped from her Berkeley, Calif., apartment by the Symbionese Liberation Army in 1974.

Man offers kidney for sale

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — George Evans needs money, and the unemployed welfare recipient thinks he has found a way, though a bit unorthodox, to raise about $3,000.

Evans ran the following ad in a local paper this week:

"KIDNEY — for sale, need the money. 422-7489. Anything that's honest."

Evans, 38, said he isn't concerned whether his plan is moral or legal. "This is the only way I can get some money, and the law can't stop me," he said. "It's my kidney and I can do what I want with it."

It's a woman's right—

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — It's a woman's right to change her mind but...

Authorities said that Lillian Morris, 50, dressed in a smartly tailored black suit, walked into a Bank of America office Wednesday and handed a teller a note that read: "I want $25,000."

The teller put a stack of bank notes on the counter whereupon Miss Morris said: "I don't want it. Put it back in the drawer. I want to be arrested."

The woman then sat down and waited until FBI agents and Los Angeles police arrived. She was arrested and booked on a charge of suspicion of robbery.

Pastor, assistant arrested

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Robert Omans, 54, pastor of the Bible Way Church of Pacoima, and his assistant, Harry Baker, 58, were accused Wednesday of sexually molesting young boys.

The alleged sexual encounters began six years ago when the youngsters, now 14-and 15-year-old members of the church, were only 8, officials said. Details were not disclosed.

Investigators said warrants were filed following a weeklong investigation by the police department's unit for sexually exploited children.

The pastor was charged with eight counts of child molesting and Baker was named in six counts.

Baker was held on $10,000 bail.

Omans, whose bail was set at $25,000, was sought by police.

Churchill portrait destroyed

PORTRAIT OF WINSTON CHURCHILL
... painted by Graham Sutherland

LONDON (UPI) — Sir Winston Churchill publicly called the parliament-commissioned portrait of him "a great work of art."

Privately, he confided the work by Graham Sutherland made him look "half-witted, which I ain't."

That was 23 years ago and Churchill's 80th birthday present has been missing ever since.

Wednesday, the truth of its whereabouts finally was told.

Executors for Lady Churchill's estate said they "felt it right to announce" that she had destroyed the $196,000 portrait before Churchill died.

"She had been distressed to see how much the picture, which they both disliked, preyed on her husband's mind," the executors said.

The executors said Lady Churchill, who died last month at age 92, had told her family that she promised Winston the work "would never see the light of day."

Sutherland, who has painted dozens of famous Britons, said he bore no rancor over the incident, but thought it was "without question an act of vandalism."

Police store urn, ashes

FORT WORTH, Texas (UPI) — Walter Claude Blount was cremated almost 50 years ago, but police are still trying to assign him a final resting place.

Blount's remains have sat in the midst of stolen bicycles and stereos in the police department's property room for almost two years after workers spotted the copper urn containing the ashes in a downtown hotel about to be demolished.

A note on the bottom of the urn said Blount died June 18, 1932, in Los Angeles at age 59 and was cremated at Inglewood Park Cemetery.

Cemetery records show Blount's remains were claimed by Etta Blount, thought to be his wife, but nothing else is known of him. The hotel had been used as a retirement center and police speculate Mrs. Blount may have left the ashes behind.

A police spokesman said Wednesday that authorities in Los Angeles had been asked to trace Blount's relatives, and the ashes would remain in the property room.

"I guess it could become a permanent fixture," he said.

House sitters make the rounds

HOUSTON (UPI) — During long absences, keeping the house warm, pets fed, plants watered, car started, mail collected and burglars diverted can be a problem. Houston Homewatchers Inc. will solve it for a price.

They'll even throw in a supply of garbage to empty just to give the old homestead a real lived-in look.

"We set up the business with a couple of ads in the newspaper and immediately got tremendous response," said Ms. Janice Beale, founder and president. "People were intrigued that we would be coming into their houses daily."

For $4.50 a day, Ms. Beale, her neighbor and partner, Barbara Marcus, or one of their staff of four will enter the house daily to check security, adjust drapes, set timed lights and gather the mail and newspapers.

"There is garbage collection in Houston twice a week and on the days the people have their garbage collected, we put out a bag of garbage," Ms. Beale said. "If you don't have it, we supply it. From somewhere comes a bag.

"We take great pains to make the house look lived in, to open and shut draperies, that sort of thing."

They also will start the car and feed hamsters, goldfish and parakeets for no extra charge. But larger pets will cost you. Full service plus one dog raises the fee to $8.50 daily.

Each additional big pet is $2 more, but that includes two visits a day, walking if requested and, of course, feeding, with the client buying the dog food.

There are additional services.

"For $30 a day we clean the house," Ms. Beale said. "We do supply a house sitter for $30 a week. Mowing the lawn costs $7.50 a mow.

"For $5 a day, clients supply us with grocery list before they leave town, we have all those groceries purchased and cupboarded for them so there's no frantic shopping when they come back."

They even consider special requests.

"We've gone to the grocery store to buy a certain kind of barbecued chicken for a certain cat. We've also given medicine to animals. One hamster would eat only hard-boiled eggs."

Ms. Beale started housewatching in wealthy Hillsborough, Calif., three years ago, after a bad experience in boarding her own dog during a trip to Hawaii.

"We came to the conclusion that kennels and boarding places were just not the right place for dogs," she said. "Cats fared even worse."

Handwriting expert firm on 'will' views

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — A Parisian handwriting expert said Wednesday the handwriting in the so-called Mormon will central to the Howard Hughes estate battle is not that of onetime gas station owner Melvin Dummer or his wife, Bonnie.

"I came here to testify and not to defend a cause," the handwriting expert, Pierre Faideau, said under cross examination. "I did a conscientious piece of work that took me a long time."

Faideau believes the Mormon will was written by Hughes.

He was asked by attorney Paul Freese, representing three second cousins of Hughes, whether the document might have been written by the Dummars. Faideau said he compared writing in the Mormon will with examples of writing by Dummar and his wife, Bonnie, and that, in his opinion, the will was not written by either.

Dummar, a former service station owner in Utah, is a one sixteenth beneficiary in the Mormon will. He said in a deposition that a mysterious stranger delivered the document to his service station about three weeks after Hughes died April 5, 1976, and that he took it to the headquarters of the Mormon Church in Salt Lake City.

In direct testimony earlier this week, Faideau told the jury:

"In my soul and conscience, I can say that this document is authentic."

A United Nations interpreter provided English-to-French and French-to-English transations during Faideau's court appearance.

Dad home with babies

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (UPI) — More than 10 percent of the fathers of Swedish babies born in 1977 made use of their legal right to stay home and take care of their toddlers.

A government report Wednesday said 6,000 fathers stayed home an average of 40 days of the 210-day parental leave allowed by a 1974 law.

Rain or snow expected this weekend

Twin Falls, North Side, Burley-Rupert Area:

Considerable cloudiness with periods of light rain at times through Friday. High temperatures in the mid-40s and overnight lows 30 to 35 degrees.

Saturday's outlook calls for chance of rain.

Hailey, Camas Prairie, lower Wood River Valley:

Considerable cloudiness with occasional rain or snow at times through Friday. High temperatures near 40 degrees and overnight lows in the 20s.

Saturday's outlook calls for chance of snow.

Synopsis:

The warm, moist southerly flow aloft continues to keep a blanket of clouds over southern Idaho. Rainfall amounts during the night over the Magic Valley ranged from .04 of an inch at Burley to .16 at Hagerman. Snow conditions in the ski areas continue to improve.

The general weather pattern is expected to change very little during the next few days. High pressure continues to build along the West Coast which will keep us under the warm, moist southerly flow into the weekend.

The forecast for Saturday through Monday indicates periods of light rain or snow to continue in the valleys with snow in the higher elevations. High temperatures mainly in the 40s and overnight lows in the 20s.

Low price on Alaska gas

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Natural gas from Alaska may sell in the lower 48 states for as much as $5.35 per thousand cubic feet under existing prices or even more if Congress raises U.S. gas prices, the chairman of the Northwest Alaskan Pipeline Co. said Wednesday.

John McMillian said those anticipated charges — almost 3.7 times more than the maximum now allowed for domestic gas sold across state lines today — mean the price of Alaskan gas must be averaged among all U.S. gas users to get consumer costs down to a practical level.

Government rejection of averaged, or "rolled-in" pricing, would create so many uncertainties about selling the Alaskan gas that it would be impossible to get financial backing for a planned $10 billion pipeline from Alaska's North Slope to the lower 48 states, he said.

McMillian said the wellhead price of the Alaskan gas will be established either by the energy bill now before a House-Senate conference committee or, if the conferees are unable to break a gas pricing deadlock, by the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission.

The House version of the energy bill would raise the top price for domestic gas to $1.75 per thousand cubic feet. There is a possibility the maximum might be raised even higher to get producing-state senators to agree to some of the expanded federal controls contained in the House measure.

McMillian [illegible] Northwest [illegible] said the anticipated [illegible] cost to U.S. distributors for gas from Alaska probably would be $3.65, based on the present wellhead price of $1.45.

Food boosts price index

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Wholesale prices rose a substantial 0.7 percent in December, ending 1977 with a 6.6 percent annual rate of inflation, the Labor Department reported today.

Higher food prices were blamed for most of the December increase, which was nearly double a 0.4 percent rise in November.

The report — a harbinger of trends in the retail market — was based on a new Finished Goods Price Index, not the old Wholesale Price Index. The old index rose 0.5 percent, but Bureau of Labor officials claim the new one is more accurate.

The 6.6 percent annual increase in wholesale prices over the last year compares to 3.3 percent at the end of 1976. Administration economists predict a 6 percent annual inflation rate will prevail for consumers over the next few years.

Food prices rose 1.5 percent in December, the biggest increase in six months. The increase was blamed on higher pork, fish, dairy and egg prices. Fresh fruit and coffee prices declined. These changes soon will be showing up in groceries.

The Finished Goods Price Index, which measures only the prices of wholesale goods that are ready to be sold to their final user, was 185.5 in December. This means that goods costing $100 a decade ago, now cost $185.50.

The Wholesale Price Index, which measures the prices of goods at every stage of processing, was 188.2 — meaning that goods under this index have nearly doubled in price over the past decade. It was 5.9 percent higher than a year ago.

Wholesale prices were up sharply at the beginning of 1977 as a result of shortages created by severe weather. The trend turned downward at mid-year, and then began heating up again. The December rate was similar to an 0.8 percent rise in October.

Consumer finished goods, which are considered to be the best advance measure of trends in the retail market, were up 6.3 percent in 1977.

Excluding food, wholesale prices rose at a more moderate 0.2 percent rate in December. Consumer items rose 0.6 percent, led by items like jewelry, furniture and gasoline. Auto prices were unchanged.

Goods purchased by industry rose 0.5 percent in December.

Strike talks resume

By United Press International

Representatives of striking coal miners and the soft coal industry reopened negotiations in Washington today at the request of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service.

Frigid weather, meanwhile, kept strike activity to a minimum in the Appalachian coalfields. The walkout started five weeks ago and a freak accident death marred the relative peace Wednesday.

Neither United Mine Workers President Arnold Miller nor President Joseph Brennan of the Bituminous Coal Operators Association would discuss matters to be talked over at the negotiations at the office of the mediation service.

Medicare deductible up $20 over 1977 benefit periods

TWIN FALLS — The Medicare hospital insurance deductible will be $144 for benefit periods beginning in 1978, James Fritzley, Social Security district manager in Twin Falls, said today.

This represents an increase of $20 over the $124 deductible effective during 1977.

The deductible is the amount people pay toward the cost of services covered by Medicare hospital insurance during the first 60 days of hospital care provided during a benefit period. The increase will not affect people whose benefit periods began in 1977, Fritzley added, but will apply to people who start a benefit period in 1978.

A benefit period is the way of measuring a person's use of services under Medicare hospital insurance. A person's first benefit period starts when he or she enters a hospital after hospital insurance begins. It ends when the person has been out of the hospital or other facility primarily providing skilled nursing or rehabilitation services for 60 days in a row. There is no limit to the number of benefit periods a person can have.

The increase in the deductible will also cause increases in the other coinsurance amounts people are responsible for under Medicare hospital insurance, Fritzley said.

For the 61st through the 90th day of hospital care, the patient will be responsible for paying $36 day, up from the $35 day rate for 1977. For each of the 60 "reserve" hospital days available to people with Medicare, the patient will be responsible for $72 a day. For the 21st through the 100th day of care in a skilled nursing care facility available in a benefit period, the patient will be responsible for paying $18, up from the $15.50 paid in 1977 benefit periods.

The staff in the Twin Falls Social Security Office will be glad to answer any questions people have about Medicare and the new deductible. The office is located at 156 Second Ave. W. The telephone number is 733-6050.

IRS offers assistance

TWIN FALLS — Effective immediately, the Twin Falls office of the Internal Revenue Service at 1061 Blue Lakes Blvd. N. will offer "walk-in" taxpayer assistance Monday through Friday from 8:30 a.m. to 4:15 p.m.

"These hours will continue through the income tax filing season," according to John Eastham, IRS director's representative for Twin Falls.

Twin Falls area taxpayers may also obtain help on federal tax matters by dialing 1-800-632-5990 toll free. This free telephone aid is available throughout the filing period between the hours of 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Soviets balk at sharing harvest info

MOSCOW — The director of the University of Idaho Agricultural Experiment Station, just back from a nine-day negotiating trip to the Soviet Union, says the Russians held firm on their previous refusal to supply U.S. planners advance information on grain harvest prospects.

"The Russians are not going to provide us 'threshing data,' as they call it, as the crops come off the fields," said Dr. Raymond J. Miller. "Instead, they agreed to make crop data available each November when other consolidated harvest information is released."

Miller, representing the National Association of State Universities and Land-Grant Colleges, was part of a 14-member U.S. negotiating team which met with Russian officials last month at Moscow, Russia. The Joint US-USSR Committee on Cooperation in Agriculture reviewed progress in agricultural cooperation between the two nations and hammered out a new agreement that continues the 1973 accords which were a product of detente.

Besides exchanging crop yield information, the renegotiated agreement provides for cooperation between American and Russian researchers in crop, soil and animal sciences and agricultural engineering.

"We discussed exchanging teams of scientists studying ways to increase production on 'arid pastures' or rangelands," Miller said. "In addition, the Soviets want to exchange information on permafrost or frozen arctic soils, saline soils and seed technology, and they're interested in animal vaccines and large animal complexes."

The UI administrator said the Russians would like to visit U.S. agribusinesses to observe how decisions are made. They also indicated interest in exchanging teams to study corn and sorghum production and plant modeling.

The Soviets, Miller said, asked that more researchers from American universities and colleges become involved in team visits.

Comparing U.S. and Soviet agriculture, Miller said production agriculture's share of the gross national product is 22 per cent in the Soviet Union, while it amounts to four percent in the United States. Nearly 30 percent of the Russian labor force is engaged in production agriculture, but less than five percent of the American people work in agriculture.

"In the Soviet Union, agriculture has much more political influence," he said, noting that agricultural failures brought down two recent Russian leaders, Malenkov and Khrushchev. "Brezhnev is aware of agriculture's power and, as a result, has undertaken several new programs."

The Idaho administrator indicated Russian agriculture is much more labor intensive than the American industry. Farm productivity is lower, though, as one Russian farmer produces enough for himself and seven others but each U.S. farmer can provide for 46 others.

More than twice the size of the United States and located at the same latitudes as Canada and Alaska, the Soviet Union leads the world in production of wheat, oats, barley, potatoes, sugarbeets and cotton. Much of the nation's lands are unavailable for crop production, however, because temperature is a critical limiting factor.

"It's too cold to grow any crops on 30 percent of the land, and only very hardy, early ripening varieties can be produced on another 40 percent," Miller said. In the United States, productivity is restricted by temperature on just 20 percent of the land.

Production units consist of cooperative farms or kolkhozes and state farms or sovkhozes. Each cooperative farm resident is given one-half hectare (a little more than one acre) of land for a house, outbuildings and garden.

"It's amazing, but crops grown in these gardens account for 30 percent of total agricultural production in the Soviet Union," Miller said, noting citizens are permitted to sell their produce on the open market. "This is capitalism at work."

Potato co-op organizes

PORTLAND — Robert Krug, Connell, Wash., was elected president of the Tri-State Potato Federation at its organizational meeting here.

The federation is a farmer cooperative representing the Potato Growers of Idaho, the Malheur (Ore.) County Potato Bargaining Association, and the Washington Potato Growers Association. Combined membership is more than 2,000 growers.

Also elected were Keith Tallman, Adrian, Ore., vice president, and Idaborn Laverle Stecklein, secretary-treasurer. All officers elected are presidents of the participating grower associations.

Krug said the goal of the federation is to improve growers potato market opportunities, to help the potato industry in ways that growers, processors and consumers can benefit, and to develop improvements to potato growing contracts that will improve quality of the delivered produce and bring better net returns to growers and processors.

Among policies adopted is one providing that each participating association inform the others of impending decisions to approve potato growing contracts.

Grain dust law probe sought

BONNERS FERRY, Idaho (UPI) — Don Howe, Bonners Ferry, President of the National Wheat Growers Association, has joined Rep. George Hansen, R-Idaho, in calling for a federal investigation into government laws regulating grain elevator dust collection.

Hansen, Howe and others have suggested there is evidence to show that Environmental Protection Agency and Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA) rules and regulations have caused rather than prevented conditions which have led to numerous grain elevator fires.

The contention is government-required dust collection systems, which recycle grain dust back through the elevator, increased dust concentrations (and fire risk) during loading operations.

Hansen asked for a General Accounting Office investigation into the matter.

Howe added that he is also opposed to a crash inspection program for federal grain inspectors which was proposed after the recent grain terminal fires.

Futuristic images shown

LONDON (UPI) — Lasers may or may not be the light of the future, but Britain's Royal Academy of Art demonstrated Wednesday that they certainly are fun.

"Light Fantastic 2" is the academy's second exhibition in which seeing is not believing.

Pin-thin laser beams dance along its walls and cover ceilings with shifting patterns accompanied by what a spokesman called "mindblowing music."

Appropriately, one futuristic image shows C3PO and R2D2, the robots from "Star Wars." Photographed models of the movie's spaceships also are on view.

But the main features are holograms, those scarcely credible pictures which capture all three dimensions on a flat surface.

On public show for the first time are high-speed holograms made with "pulse lasers." These show action in its tracks. The show's most appealing demonstrations are holograms of two scantily clad cancers halted in their three-dimensional stride.

USFS job deadline Jan. 15

TWIN FALLS — The deadline for filing of applications for summer employment with the Forest Service will be Jan. 15.

Fewer applications have been received this year, so young people who will be 18 years of age by the date they would be able to work may wish to submit an application.

Applications will be accepted if postmarked by Jan. 15, but will be returned to the applicant if postmarked after that date. The applications will be available through Friday at the Sawtooth National Forest supervisor's office at 1525 Addison Ave. E. or at district ranger stations.

Anyone having any questions concerning summer employment is encouraged to call the supervisor's office. 733-3638.

Cattle imports scored

DENVER (UPI) — The National Cattlemen's Association has called on the Carter administration to take administrative action to stabilize cattle imports from Canada and Mexico.

In a letter to Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland, NCA President Richard McDougal said more than 900,000 cattle were imported from those two nations in the first 11 months of 1977.

McDougal said the amount was not large, but "due to seasonal fluctuations and local market impact, these imports do have devastating consequences to the domestic producers along the border states."

Routine business handled by Valley School Board

VALLEY SCHOOLS — Routine matters were handled at the regular Valley School Board meeting held Monday at the Valley High School.

Permission was given the high school student council to install a candy vending machine in the Valley High School.

A report was given by the Valley SOS on the progress of the community education classes that the group is sponsoring in the school district. Mrs. Vari Agree, co-president of the Valley SOS, reported that three classes are already in session, three classes will begin next week, another will start in February, and seven more classes are still in the planning stages and will be announced at a later date.

The board gave approval for high school principal Dale Tilley to attend the State Principal's meeting in Boise January 30-31, and for Supt. Arlyn Bodily to attend the State Superintendent's meeting in Boise January 19-20.

The first semester of school will end January 20th.

Auction set at Hagerman

HAGERMAN — Hagerman school trustees plan on holding an auction of old and unused odds and ends in the spring, Supt. Ken Black said Tuesday.

He said, "We want to clean out our staorage area of old desks and other items no longer used, including obsolete books."

Black said effective July 1 the district will begin paying unemployment insurance for school personnel.

The superintendent was offered a three-year contract and it was decided bids on the school bus operation will be opened Feb. 13.

Shoshone approves jobs

SHOSHONE — The Shoshone school district is participating in the Young Adult Corps, a new federal program to provide employment for young adults.

Supt. Kenneth Crothers said Tuesday the board Monday night approved having five youths paint the school gymnasium.

They are paid with federal funds and the Bureau of Land Management provides supervision, with the school providing the material.

In other business the board offered annual contracts to Crothers and high school principal James Clements.

Trustees awarded a contract to Western Mountain Superior Coach Co., Nampa, low bidder on a 30-passenger school bus body. The bid, one of four received, was for $5,224, Crothers said.

The board delayed action on increasing the salaries of hot lunch cooks.

Camas OKs certificates

FAIRFIELD — Seniors at Camas High School who do not earn a regular academic diploma will be given a certificate of attendance, trustees decided Monday night.

Supt. Harold Stroud said the board also discussed plans for school maintenance next summer. He said he hopes the music room can be remodeled and possibly a storage shed built, all by school maintenance personnel.

The board approved a ski program for both elementary and secondary schools for another year.

The Grade School half day weekly skiing will begin Feb. 1 and continue for four weeks. The High School program will run for four weeks beginning March 1.

Richfield teachers attend meet

RICHFIELD — The Richfield teachers negotiating committee attended the school board meeting here Monday night, but expressed no opinion.

Members include Charles Buttcane, Mrs. Marvel Hadley, V.C. Ross and Joe Hendrickson. Ross did not attend.

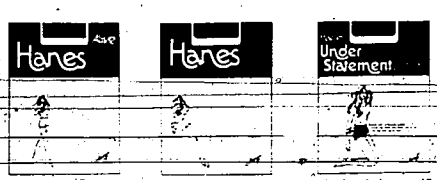

Trustees offered a yearly contract to Supt. Craig Hall, now completing his first year in the post. They expressed satisfaction with his work, according to Clerk Jackie Johnson. In other business trustees approved closure of the school last Dec. 23 because of snow.

Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1978 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 13-year-old girl with a problem that may not seem important to some people, but it is to me. I have gym three days a week, and after gym everyone has to shower or they get an "F." The gym teacher stands right there and watches you, so there is no way of getting out of it. Abby, there is one big room with four nozzles coming out of the wall, and 36 girls have to shower together.

I was raised to be modest and I just die when I have to stand naked in front of 34 other girls.

I have talked to my mother about this and she doesn't like it either, but she doesn't know what to do. Can you help me?

MUST GROUP SHOWER

Teen likes privacy

DEAR MUST: No girl should be forced to stand naked before other girls if it disturbs her. Your mother should go to the school and talk to the principal. Even though a private shower cannot be provided for each girl, for the modest ones who "just die," perhaps a little more privacy could be arranged.

DEAR ABBY: What is a man, who has been married for almost 18 years, supposed to think when he accidentally finds hidden in his wife's closet six beautiful sheer, shortie nightgowns and negligees he has never seen before?

They are certainly never worn in MY presence.

Perhaps that explains why she slips her luggage in and out of the house when making increasingly more frequent out-of-town trips—alone, to "visit her mother."

Please answer in your column, as I am beginning to be...

SUSPICIOUS

DEAR SUSPICIOUS: Either your wife is taking in laundry, or you've caught her with evidence that anyone can see through.

DEAR ABBY: I'm really ticked off at my husband for telling everyone at work that we own our own home. It's not true—we're only renting. He just got transferred and we're new in town.

He justifies his lying by saying that a home owner comes across as being more stable and solid, and it adds to his prestige. Abby, there's no way we could have bought this house because we didn't have the down payment for this (or any other) house!

Every time I hear my husband repeat that bald-faced lie I feel like a louse for keeping quiet, but I certainly can't call him a liar in front of the people he works with, can I?

I could just wring his neck. In the eight years we've been married, I've heard him tell quite a few whoppers, but none has upset me like this one.

Any suggestion? Sign me...

BITING MY TONGUE

DEAR BITING: Of course you shouldn't publicly call your husband a liar. But do tell him that the fact that he's renting the home he claims to own is almost certain to be revealed eventually. And then he'll be exposed for the phony he is.

If you feel left out and lonely, or wish you knew how to get people to like you, my new booklet, "How To Be Popular: You're Never Too Young or Too Old," is for you. Send $1 along with a long, self-addressed, stamped (24 cents) envelope to Abby, 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

your health

By LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.

Dear Dr. Lamb,

My husband and I are both 64, and our doctor, who retired a year ago, prescribed Hydergine for us. I still have some and can also get refills.

Will you please tell us about Hydergine and what it is supposed to do for aging persons? Any ill effects?

Dear Reader,

I'm afraid there is no good evidence that the medicine is really effective. There are some short-term studies to suggest that it may be helpful in decreasing confusion (in which case it should be used at all ages if my observations are on target), mood-depression and unsociability — all attributed to old age.

Fortunately there are no important side effects, and the few that have been noted would have already bothered you if you were going to have any problem taking the medication.

Therefore, I don't see any reason you can't have a refill, but considering the lack of demonstrated effectivensss of the medicine and because the symptoms the medicine is used to treat are often of obscure origin — not just old age — I think you really should see a doctor. You need a doctor who is familiar with your husband's and your medical status. It is a bad thing to start looking for a doctor when you have an emergency.

One of the difficulties in evaluating medicines that are supposed to help in aging is that any program that involves the patient or gets him active again will often benefit him. Just having someone interested in you often has a remarkable effect. The patient, in thinking medicines are helpful, may really be having a psychological response.

To give you information on what we really know about aging I am sending you The Health Letter number 1-7, Perpetual Youth, Aging. Others who want this information can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

Dear Dr. Lamb,

My daughter is a teenager, and when she is home she watches TV 10 hours a day. I have told her she will be wearing glasses very soon if she does not turn off the TV, but she does not believe me.

Her big excuse is she watches it from a distance so it will not harm her. Please tell me does watching so much TV harm her eyes? Does the distance from which she watches matter? How long should she watch TV?

Dear Reader,

The TV will not hurt her eyes. If children insist on sitting close to the TV set you might suspect they are nearsighted and need an eye examination.

The problem with too much TV is not that it will hurt the eyes but what sitting inactive so long does to the rest of the body. There are studies that show that inactivity from watching TV leads to loss of muscle strength, and symptoms of fatigue. Such people become what doctors call deconditioned, somewhat similar to a person who lies in bed all the time.

A think the answer to how much TV she can watch is the amount of time that is left after a good amount of physical activity everyday and some involvement with other people her own age, plus accomplishing her school work in good order.

Differences in ages stressed

The Elders

We're all aging. We started aging the minute the obstetrician slapped our little red behinds. The doctor — or midwife — took a look and said the magic words: "a boy" or "a girl."

We lived a number of weeks as infants, a number of months as babies. We went on to several years of childhood.

Then we went through our preteens, teens, youth, early manhood and womanhood, middle-age. Each period of life meant new aspirations, associations and activities for ourselves and our contemporaries.

For girls, childhood meant dressing dolls, jumping rope (with appropriate chants), playing potsy and jacks until about age 12. Then they discovered a more interesting game called boys.

Until their early teens, boys, in our times long ago, played marbles (knuckle down tight). We mastered the spinning of tops. We went on to stoopball, handball, baseball. Some of us collected picture cards of ball players. (Christy Mathewson was a great favorite.) Others saved stamps. We read the repetitive sagas of Horatio Alger.

At about age 15, we began to discover girls.

During all those years, we lived by the standards — and for the approval — of our contemporaries. Each successive age level set the nature, often the style, of our activities. We also knew that we would, as the years went by, partake of the activities of the age group ahead of ours. Our ways, our actions, our dreams had new perspectives over 5-to-10-year periods.

Lou Cottin

So it was through our young lives as we moved in stages toward maturity. That was the real process of aging.

Then, through some strange magic, the process stopped. At age 60 or upon retirement from some gainful occupation, we stopped aging altogether.

We became the "aged."

Between retirement and death, however old we are, we are now classed as a single group with identical interests. By whatever name we are called, "senior citizens" or "older Americans," we are "the aged." (We were once called "golden agers." But these days the name no longer fits. The gold turned out to be brass.)

All of us now are placed in one big box. All of us are lumped together, judged as a single age group. No differences among us are considered. We are all equal receivers of "services for the aging."

Think of this as a problem in simple arithmetic. We have senior agers now 85 years old. They were born in the year 1892. Their experiences during the first 20 years of their lives (to 1912) were considerably different from those of people now age 65.

So, too, were their ideas of right or wrong. Also, their behavior patterns and educational attainments. This conditioning molded the kinds of elderly people they've become.

It is nonsense to assume that men and women now 85 years old see today's world with the same eyes as younger seniors. Cleveland, McKinley, Taft and Teddy Roosevelt were the presidents who styled the former's youth. People now 85 years old may have yelled, "Get a horse," when the first automobiles dared the rutted roads. "Get Out and Get Under the Car" was their song.

But the Administration on Aging, in the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, designs its programs for the "aging." Senior club directors serve the "aging." City, county and state offices plan for the "aging." The word has no practical meaning. When everybody talks "aging" the word "aging" ceases to talk.

The differences among older people deserve consideration. The computerized projects like Medicare or Medicaid are for all of us. But only about 15 percent of us participate in non-computerized social projects for seniors. The reason is plain: Those programs are not designed for the separate age groups among us.

It is time for institutions that seek to serve those of us over 65 to redesign their programs. The style and content of those projects must be related to our different ages and varied backgrounds.

That way, we may finally receive the practical assistance we need. That way, we may also contribute one to another — and to our communities.

Lincoln man, 92, ahead of his time

By LORAYNE O. SMITH
Times-News writer

SHOSHONE — Some oldtimers may sentimentalize about the merits of the old, one-room school, but not J.O. Freeman, 92, a longtime Richfield civic leader now living in Shoshone.

As a member of the Richfield school board, he led the battle for school consolidation in Lincoln County some 30 years ago. He succeeded only to a degree.

There still are three school districts in the sparsely populated county — at Richfield, Dietrich and Shoshone — but he did manage to get three separate one-room schools merged.

Freeman still believes that children can receive a better education in a school large enough to offer better trained teachers and wider curriculum.

Thus he can be credited — or blamed, according to one's beliefs — to a great extent with the consolidation of the old Cottonwood and Burmah schools into the Shoshone district and the North End district into the Richfield school system.

The retired farmer and sheepman said he never had proposed eliminating the grade schools in Richfield or Dietrich, but he had pushed for a countywide high school, a feat accomplished in several nearby counties of Minidoka, Blaine and Cassia.

The Dietrich community particularly opposed consolidation, Freeman recalls, because of the large amount of tax money the district received from the Union Pacific Railroad.

Freeman proved his conviction about the importance of good education for his own children by renting a house in Shoshone so three of his children could attend high school here. He said his late wife kept house for their children and several cousins during the week, with everyone returning to their rural homes weekends.

There was so much snow in those years and the winters were so hard "you couldn't fight the roads," Freeman said, so the only way to insure his younger children what he considered an adequate education was to literally move them to Shoshone.

The snow would be piled so high along the country roads north of Shoshone "it was over your head if you stood on a hay rack," Freeman said.

In addition to his efforts toward school consolidation, Freeman also was instrumental in obtaining both electrical lights, through the Rural Electrification Administration (REA) and telephone service for the Burmah community about 10 miles from Richfield.

A native of Pleasant Grove, Utah, Freeman has always been active in the Mormon Church. He ran sheep with his father through western Utah and Nevada as a young man.

In 1901 he first came to Idaho, running sheep in the Soda Springs area in southeastern Idaho in the summer and wintering them near Wendover, Utah.

In those days before the Bureau of Land Management existed most of the Magic Valley was open range and the early day sheepmen had "the country pretty well sewed up," according to Freeman.

The grazing land around Shoshone in particular was already monopolized by several big sheep outfits by the time Freeman came to the Cottonwood area north of Shoshone where his father-in-law ranched.

Although he never was directly involved in the warfare between cattle and sheepmen,

J.O. FREEMAN, 92, SHOSHONE
. . . longtime Richfield civic leader

Freeman said he had a friend, Rulon Limb, who lost an arm in that highly romanticized saga of development of the West.

The man, who worked for a sheep outfit in Star Valley, Wyo., pulled into cattle country and was shot in the shoulder, resulting in the loss of his arm. Freeman said he also knew another man killed in Jackson Hole, so while some of the accounts undoubtedly have been exaggerated, the feud between free-roaming sheep outfits and the settlers with their cattle was real.

The only federal control of Western land in the early decades of the 20th century, Freeman said, was the Taylor Grazing Act which he defined as an "effort to keep the homesteaders from crowding out the ranchers."

After a few years in the Cottonwood area in the 1920's, Freeman moved to Rupert where he got his start in the sheep business.

A neighbor, R.C. May, then an official at the sugar factory at Paul, had sheep but no place to run them, Freeman recalls.

He told Freeman, "There they are. Take them and pay me $1,000 when you can." Freeman chuckled. "He must have thought I was honest."

He did repay May for the 400 head, later adding to his flock with another 600 head.

While the sheep business was profitable at that time, Freeman can't help but compare the economic plight of farmers today to prices he received. He recalls selling potatoes for 25 cents per sack" and it cost 15 cents to haul them to town."

In 1933 the Freemans moved back to Lincoln County, purchasing the ranch near Richfield which he operated with his sons until retiring in 1963. One son, J.E. Freeman, still farms there. He has two other sons, Raymond in Shoshone and Roger who lives in Twin Falls. He also has three daughters, who live inCalifornia, Tacoma, Wash., and Helen Stowell, who lives next door to her father.

One unusual feature of Freeman's long and still active life is that he has helped celebrate the golden wedding of his oldest daughter and her husband, Mr. and Mrs. Francis Stowell, Nov. 5, 1977.

Freeman's own marriage to Myrtle Sorensen Oct. 2, 1907, lasted 64 years. Mrs. Freeman was an invalid the last eight years of her life. During that time her husband learned to keep house and has been continuing to care for his own home for the six years since her death.

He still does his own washing and cooking with an occasional assist from his next door neighbor.

In addition to his six children Freeman has 16 grandchildren, 32 great-grandchildren and three great-great-grandchildren.

Senior wants to report grievance

HEARTLINE

HEARTLINE is a service for senior citizens. Its purpose is to answer questions and solve problems — fast. If you have a question or a problem not answered in these columns, write HEARTLINE, 114 E. Dayton St., West Alexandria, Ohio 45381. You will receive a prompt reply but you must include a stamped, self-addressed envelope. The most useful replies will be printed in this column.

HEARTLINE: I have a complaint against a company that I think would come under the Food and Drug Administration. Can you tell me how to do this? K.B.

A: Consumers sometimes come across a food, drug, device, cosmetic or hazardous substance that they have reason to believe is mislabeled, unsanitary, or otherwise harmful.

When you report a legitimate grievance to the Food and Drug Administration, you are performing a public service. The information you provide can and often does lead to the detection and correction of a violation of the Federal Food, Drug and Cosmetic Act or the Hazardous Substance Act. The Food and Drug Administration cannot take action solely on the basis of your complaint, but it will investigate your complaint promptly and act in accordance with the requirements of the law if a violation is established.

Here are some guidelines to follow in reporting suspected violations of the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act.

You may refer your complaint in writing or by phone to the nearest field office or resident inspection station. FDA has 17 district offices and 95 resident inspection stations throughout the country. In most major cities, you can find the addresses of the nearest FDA office in the telephone directory under U.S. Government, Department of Health, Education and Welfare, Food and Drug Administration. You may wish to write directly to the Food and Drug Administration, U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare, 5600 Fishers Lane, Rockville, Maryland 20852.

Report your problem by the following method.

1. Report your grievance promptly giving your name, address, telephone number and directions to residence or place of business.
2. State clearly what appears to be wrong.
3. Describe the label of the product and give any code marks that appear on the container. (In the case of canned food, these are usually embossed into or stamped on the lid of the can.
4. Give the name and address of the store where the article was bought and the date of purchase.
5. Save whatever remains of the suspect product or the empty container for your doctor's guidance or possible examination by FDA.
6. Hold any unopened container of the product bought at the same time.
7. If any injury is involved, see a doctor at once.
8. Also report the suspect product to the manufacturer, packer, or distributor shown on the label of the product and to the store where you bought it.

HEARTLINE: I am going to be retiring from my Civil Service job with the government in July of this year. At the time of my retirement, I should have approximately six months of unused sick leave. Can this time be used to increase my retirement? G.S.

A: Yes, this can be done. When the employee retires on an immediate annuity or dies, the time represented by the accumulated unused sick leave to the employee's credit is added to the employee's actual service used in computing annuity. An immediate annuity is one which begins no later than one month after separation from the service. This includes annuity to an employee who retires optionally, or who retires for age, disability, or due to being involuntarily separated from the service. It does not include annuity to a separated employee who is entitled to deferred retirement at a future date.

The unused sick pay can only be used in figuring the total number of years and months of service used in computing the amount of annuity or surviving annuity. It can not be used in figuring the high average pay and cannot be counted towards the minimum length of service necessary to retire.

HEARTLINE: I am 67 years old, and I have always worked in the coal mines. I now received the Black Lung benefits. Can you tell me when the last raise in Black Lung benefits was granted? E. L.

A: Black lung payments to coal miners and their families increased by 7.05 percent with checks mailed in November.

Black lung benefit increases are linked by law to the pay increases of Federal Government employees at the GS-2 step-1 level. They received a 7.05 percent raise in October.

The monthly payment to a coal miner disabled by black lung, or to his widow, now is $219.90 — up from $205.40. The maximum black lung benefit payable when there are three or more dependents is $439.70 a month, increased from $410.80. A miner or widow with one dependent now gets $329.80 a month — up from $308.10, and with two dependents, $384.80 monthly — up from $359.50.

The higher payments go to 163,100 miners; 142,900 widows of miners; 3,300 other survivors; and 180,900 dependents of miners. Total monthly benefits will increase to $85.4 million from the previous monthly level of $79.4 million.

Black lung benefits are payable under the Federal Coal Mine Health and Safety Act. The Social Security Administration makes payments on all approved claims filed before July 1, 1973, (and certain survivors' claims filed thereafter) while the U.S. Department of Labor is responsible for payment of most new claims filed since July 1, 1973.

Actress seeks drug diversion program

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (UPI) — Mackenzie Phillips, the 18-year-old co-star of the television show "One Day at a Time" who was arrested on a drug-related disorderly conduct charge, has asked to enter a drug diversion program.

The misdemeanor charge against her could be dropped if she is admitted to the program and successfully completes it.

The actress, who had been due in court today for a pretrial hearing, made the surprise request Monday before Municipal Court Judge Andre J. Weiss. The judge told her to consult a probation officer to see if she would benefit from such a program.

A further hearing on the case was set for Feb. 3.

Miss Phillips, daughter of musician John Phillips of the old Mamas and Paps singing group, was found lying semiconscious on a Hollywood street Nov. 23. She was charged with misdemeanor disorderly conduct under the influence of drugs or alcohol.

Authorities said they found traces of alcohol and the sedative Quaalude in her blood. A small amount of cocaine was discovered on a piece of paper in her purse, but prosecutors said there was not a sufficient amount of the drug to warrant a charge of possession of dangerous drugs.

She was originally booked on the cocaine charge, but it was later dropped.

Following her arrest, she claimed she had only "one-half of a diet tablet" in her possession when arrested and had not been intoxicated, but "tripped on the curb and fell on the sidewalk."

However, sheriff's deputies said the actress was in a "semi-stuporous ... incoherent" condition when found lying on the street.

Besides playing the role of the older daughter, Julie, in the television series, Miss Phillips has appeared in the motion pictures "American Graffiti" and "Rafferty and the Gold Dust Twins."

Dropout invents cancer detector

CHICAGO (UPI) — David Phillips is a college dropout, a tinkerer and a former carpet cleaner, but when his wife developed a lump in her breast, he became a medical researcher, and officials at a prestigious cancer center say the detection device he invented works.

The test, which uses neither radiation nor surgical procedures, may be an ideal method for mass screening of women who do not have any symptoms of breast cancer, New York City's Memorial-Sloan Kettering Cancer center announced Sunday.

"I've been working on it for about 2½ years without any funding. The Sloan-Kettering announcement was a big breakthrough because no one would listen because I'm not a doctor," Phillips, 31, medical director of his newly formed Graphic Stress Corp., said Tuesday.

Graphic Stress is headquartered in the basement of Phillips' home in the Chicago suburb of Bollingbrook.

The new technique is called graphic stress telethermometry, or GST, and is administered by taking the temperature of the breast from the outside. It detects and can distinguish between both benign and cancerous breast lesions.

Mammography, currently used in most screening programs, has sparked many questions about the safety of the radiation it uses.

Dr. Ruth Snyder, the principal investigator at Sloan-Kettering, said if further tests uphold the institute's current findings, Phillips' technique could be uused to screen out many women who need not undergo further diagnosis with mammography.

In Phillips' technique, the temperature of the breast is taken by passing a miniaturized infrared heat detector over nine sections of each breast. The test measures the difference between the temperature of breast tissue and the forehead.

A certain area of the breast becomes suspect if it shows a higher temperature than the forehead, Phillips explained.

A simple ice water test is administered to determine whether any areas of higher temperature are benign or malignant. The woman's hands are submerged in ice water for 15 seconds to reduce the body temperature. The temperature is taken again, and the lesions will cool off if they are benign.

Malignant tissue, however, will remain at a constant, higher temperature, he said.

Phillips, the father of four children, who previously operated a small carpet cleaning business, happened into medical research by chance.

"I've always been a tinkerer, and this friend of mine had a chance to import a German-made machine that is extremely sensitive to taking temperatures without touching the patient. He didn't know what to do with it," said Phillips, a speech therapy major who dropped out of college after 3½ years.

With his natural bent for investigation, Phillips started experimenting, taking the temperature of his wife's breasts.

"When it showed up with a hot spot, I figured the thing didn't work," he said. But three months after the test, a lump showed up on one of her breasts and Phillips knew he had something.

Technicians tested his wife — whose tumor later was found benign — with mammography, needle aspiration and various oter examinations. But all the tests were inconclusive, he said.

"I always demanded to be in the room with her and saw how dehumanizing the tests were. I figured there's got to be another way," said Phillips, who now employs three technicians. "I went to a medical library and researched all I could on breast cancer and temperature scanning. Then I sat down and worked it all out."

In either standard American or expert standard American North's jump to four spades shows 19 or 20 points in support of spades and as such cannot be regarded as a stop bid.

Experts refine the bid even further by providing that it is not made with a singleton.

South's 12 high-card points including two aces and the queen of his partner's suit looked very good to him and he Blackwooded with every intention of bidding a slam if North showed one ace. When North showed two aces, South really should have settled for six, but he bid five notrump to invite seven.

We don't know what he would have bid if North just showed his three kings by bidding six spades, but North bid seven directly. North's reasoning was that with two aces and four kings his hand would have been too strong for a mere four-spade call. Hence, he should bid seven with three kings.

It worked out very well. South drew trumps with three leads and went after diamonds. The suit broke 4-2, so he got two club discards, trumped one heart in dummy and wrapped up the slam.

Ask the Experts

A Pennsylvania reader wants to know if we approve of the short diamond and adds, "Whatever that is?"

We do approve of the use of a one-diamond opening with something like:

♠ A K x ♥ x x x ♦ x x x ♣ Q x x x

With 14 high-card points you can't afford to pass. You don't want to bid that bad spade suit, so you bid your minor with high cards in it.

Love wins again

Daily Telegraph, London

LONDON — A woman who spent 11 months and a day in jail for refusing to return about $65,000 to her coal-merchant husband is back at home — without returning the money.

At the family home, Wharf Cottage, Canal Side, Essington, near Wolverhampton, Mrs. Jean Payne, 40, disclosed that her husband Wallace, 45, had met her on her release.

She said: "We went for a second honeymoon in Shropshire. You can say love won through in the end."

However, she added: "I am happy to be back but I don't ever intend to talk about that money either now or in the future. I am not prepared to discuss why."

Her husband said: "I am not saying another word about anything. A still tongue keeps a wise head."

Mrs. Payne was jailed Jan. 21 last year for contempt after refusing to comply with a court order to return the money.

On Oct. 20 in Leeds High Court, Justice Faulkes offered to release her for Christmas provided she complied with the order.

"I'll wait until after Christmas then," she replied.

Worst dressed

THESE three beauties share a common bond. It's not their show business careers, not their beauty, talent or brains. What it is is the way they dress and Hollywood fashion designer Mr. Blackwell doesn't like their style. He has included them in his annual selection of 10 "Worst Dressed" women. Of country singer Dolly Parton, left, Blackwell says: "Scarlett O'Hara dressed like Mae West in "My Little Chickdee." He tags Latin entertainer Charo, center, "Cuchi, cuchi . . is that a dress or a bug killer?" Topping his list is actress Farrah Fawcett-Majors, right, of [illegible] Blackwell says, [illegible]h splits in her dress [illegible]arthquake."

TERRIE RICHESON

February wedding planned

BUHL — Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Eugene Richeson, Buhl, announce the engagement and forthcoming marriage of their daughter, Terrie Marie, to Robert Harding Davis, Groton, Conn.

Davis is the son of Mrs. Florence Tueker Davis, Arlington, Va.

Miss Richeson is a graduate of Buhl high school. She has been attending Brigham Young University, majoring in English.

Davis is a graduate of Wakefield high school and has graduated from the United States Naval Academy in ocean engineering. He is presently a lieutenant junior grade stationed at New London Submarine Base, Groton, as a nuclear submarine officer.

The couple plans a Feb. 14 wedding at the Mormon Temple, Salt Lake City, Utah.

August date set

TWIN FALLS — Mr. and Mrs. Daniel J. Jacob of Twin Falls announce the engagement and forthcoming marriage of their daughter, Maureen Brierley, to Mark McKain.

McKain is the son of Dr. and Mrs. John McKain of Twin Falls.

Miss Brierley is attending Boise State University as a sociology major. McKain is a student at the College of Idaho and will be graduated in February with a degree in zoology. He is employed in Boise at the Idaho Fish and Game Department.

The couple plans to be married Aug. 12.

Community education classes set

VALLEY SCHOOLS — Four more community education classes have been organized and three will begin next week as part of the Valley SOS Community education program in the Valley School District.

Classes starting next week include oil painting, ladies exercising program and a recreational basketball program for men.

Mrs. Vari Agee, co-president of the Valley SOS, reports that another class in macrame will begin the first week in February. Classes in conversational Spanish, quilting and basic mechanics are already in session.

Oil painting classes will start Thursday at 7 p.m. at the Valley High School with Mrs. Colleen Tilley as instructor. The classes will be free except for a small custodial fee that will be divided up between the students. Students must furnish their own materials. Please call Mrs. Tilley at 829-5573 if interested.

A ladies exercising program will be offered Monday, Wednesday and Thursday evenings from 7 to 8 p.m. at the Lutheran Church gymnasium in Eden. There will be a $5 fee for the eight-week program. No advance registration is necessary.

Don McBride will supervise the recreational basketball for men starting Monday from 7 to 9 p.m. at the Hazelton Elementary School gym.

Mary Freeman, Jerome County home economist, will conduct the macrame class starting Feb. 2 from 2 to 4 p.m. at the Hazelton Housing Authority meeting room. Four projects are planned, with materials for the first project being furnished. Participants must furnish their own materials for the other three projects. Anyone interested please call 825-5835 to sign up. A minimum of ten people is required.

There is still room in the basic mechanics class that is already in session. Those interested may call Bob Stokesberry at 829-5439 for further information. Classes are from 1 to 4 p.m. Saturdays at the Stokesberry shop in Hazelton.

Classes yet to be announced are in welding, small engines, archery, Spanish cooking, yoga, children's ballet and modern ballet.

Cousin Beedie writes book

ATLANTA (UPI) — Georgia Sen. Hugh Carter of Plains, the president's cousin, said Wednesday he will publish a Tom Sawyer and Huck Finn reminiscence about growing up with Jimmy Carter.

Carter said "Cousin Beedie and Cousin Hot" will reveal some previously untold tales about his famous cousin's rise from the Sumter County legislative district to the White House.

He said chapters will involve their boyhood business selling ice cream on hot weekends, the rift in the Plains Baptist Church and the reasons then Gov. Carter did not appoint him to the U.S. Senate in 1971.

"I don't belabor the political life too much because a book can get dull if you go into too many of those things," Carter said. "It's about the Carter lives all through the years together in Plains."

Carter said the president still calls him "Cousin Beedie," although his own approach to his younger cousin has changed.

"His daddy named him 'Hotshot' when we were boys, and everybody kind of shortened that to 'Hot.'" Carter recalled. "Jimmy calls me 'Beedie' and I call him 'Hot' except now, I mostly call him 'Mr. President.'"

Carter said he has been working on the book since the Georgia General Assembly adjourned last March 10. He said Frances Spatz Leighton, whose book "Fishbait" recently recounted anecdotes of former House doorkeeper William "Fishbait" Miller's colorful career, is co-authoring the book and it will be published in May by Prentice Hall.

Nurse receives training

JEROME — Ruby Crosby, R.N., St. Benedict's Hospital, Jerome, will leave for Denver, Colo., to attend a four-month geriatric nurse practitioner training program at the University of Colorado School of Nursing.

Funding for her training is being provided by the Mountain States Health Corp., Boise, through a grant from the W.K. Kellogg Foundation to improve patient care in skilled nursing facilities.

She is employed at St. Benedict's Hospital, one of 30 nursing homes participating in the Mountain States Health Corp. project in Idaho, Montana, Nevada, Oregon, Washington and Wyoming. In addition to the four-month academic program, Mrs. Crosby will complete an eight-month preceptorship under Dr. Lauren Neher at the St. Benedict's Hospital Long Term Care Unit. Following her preceptorship, she will be working with St. Benedict's Hospital and Long Term Care Unit.

Murtaugh honorees named

MURTAUGH — Honor roll students for the second nine weeks of the quarter and for the semester have been announced by Murtaugh High School.

During the quarter, freshman Paul Graff received all A's. He also received an A average for the semester.

Receiving A's and B's for the semester and quarter is Ladean Baker. Doug Peterson received A's and B's for the semester.

Sophomores Karrie Subb Bates, Natalie Mathews, Monte Bates and Warren Critchett received A's and B's for both quarters.

Juniors Jim Stanger and Janice Boley received A's and B's for the semester, while Chris Biggers received these for the quarter.

Seniors Jill Anderson, Lorrie Brashier, Rhonda Close and Wendy Curtis received A's and B's for the semester.

Jogging class set Monday at CSI

TWIN FALLS — The College of Southern Idaho's adult recreation program will feature a fitness jogging program for adults of all ages every Monday, Wednesday and Friday mornings from 6:45 to 7:45, beginning on Monday. The class will meet in CSI's gym.

The hour-long program will consist of four phases. Phase I will involve a series of exercises designed to work out the flexibility and strength of the six major joints involved in movement. This will be followed by a five-minute endurance warm-up, consisting of walking and jogging with some stretching to gradually increase body temperature and heart rate.

Phase III will consist of endurance jogging in ten different levels from beginning to advanced, on a progressive program leading to a minimum goal of 15 minutes continuous jog three times a week.

In the final phase there will be a cool down and recovery period, involving walking and stretching exercises to lower body temperature and heart rate and to stretch out tight muscles.

"One unique feature of our new program," said Bob Wright, CSI adult recreation director, "will be the monitoring of each individual's heart rate during the class workout, so as not to exceed a safe working heart rate."

This course is open to all residents of the junior college district. To enroll sign up at the gym. There is a fee of $7.50 for the semester, which includes a lock and locker. Daily towel service is extra.

Doll house auctioned to dealer

LONDON (UPI) — An art auction house Tuesday said a doll's house for $256,500.

Not just any doll's house, of course, but a palace for a fairy queen, built without any outside doors since as everyone knows fairies always enter through windows.

"Titania's Palace" is a famous and more than somewhat incredible creation, designed by Major Sir Nevile Wilkinson beginning in 1907. It took 15 years to build.

Measuring 7 by 9 feet overall, the palace is a miracle of elaboration and miniaturization. Officially "opened" by Queen Mary in 1922, it was the combined work of flocks of architects, artists and designers.

Sir Edwin Lutyens designed a belfry whose bells played six tunes, including the National Anthem. The state rooms are in 16th century Italian style. Six cabinet makers worked on the miniature period furniture.

The pipe organ in the chapel plays. A majestic bathroom has a rock crystal tub.

Potatoes continue sluggish

CHICAGO — Potato futures continued in the doldrums Wednesday.

In other segments of the commodity futures market, cattle were stronger, pork and grains mixed and gold rallied.

Commodity News Service said potato traders, apparently waiting for Friday's stocks on hand report, left the Maine market in a narrow trading range which ended from unchanged to 6 cents higher. Volume totaled 700 cars, of which near May accounted for 630. That contract ended a penny higher at 4.70 per hundredweight.

May Western russets remained unchanged at 7.24 cwt.

Live cattle closed 50 to 17 points up, at or near the day's highs, with January 1979 off 2 points. Active business in dressed beef set the tone for futures. Volume was 7,000 contracts. Feeder cattle closed 30 to 12 points higher in a light trade of 409 contracts.

February live hogs closed 17 points higher, the market continuing its discount to cash but profit taking and ideas of increasing supplies pressured other months into closing 10 to 45 points down. Volume was 6,140. Pork bellies gained 82 points in February but other months finished 2 to 45 points off on profit taking. Volume was active at 7,880 contracts.

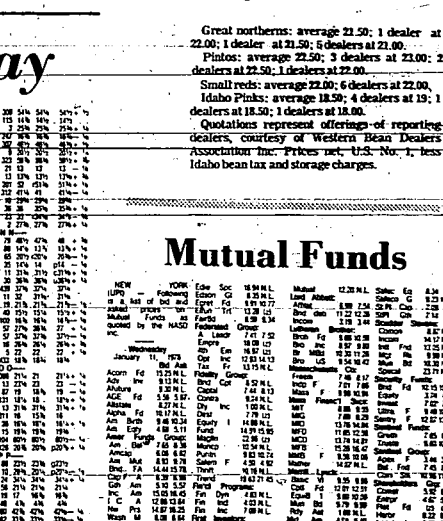

Wheat finished a slow day with prices lower in front and higher in the back, with spreading an long liquidation factors. The close was ¾ cents down to 1¾ cents higher. Corn finished mixed, a quarter cent lower to 1¾ cents higher, with early speculative interest offset later by commercial trade.

Weakness in oil and a surge of small hedging took soybean futures to the bottom of the day's range at the close, prices ending 3 cents down to 1 cent higher. Oil regained strength late in the day, finishing 6 to 39 points higher. Meal faded late in the day under crusher pressure, closing unchanged to off 1.50.

New York Sugar 11 closed with gains of 8 to 5 points on an uneventful trade of 2,810 lots.

New York Comex gold moved ahead 200 to 250 points on a trade of 9,000 contracts, after throwing off Tuesday's reversal.

Simple, profound questions help to escape, stay out of debt

(6) Always freely discuss money with your husband or wife — a fundamental of fundamentals. Talk about your goals together and what will be required financially to make them a reality. Make sure each of you knows what you have spent on credit cards, and if you're buying a big-ticket item, talk it out before you buy. If you're a mingling single, follow this rule just as rigidly, for in a sense, you have even more at stake. If you don't feel comfortable dealing with money in your relationship, you're inviting trouble and a breakup in the relationship — married or mingling. Money is an indispensible part of a permanent relationship. Deal with it in a rational, mature way.

(7) Try being goal-oriented. You fool only yourself when you live from day to day and shrug off thinking or planning for tomorrow. You also are begging for trouble that you won't be able to handle. Prepare for emergencies just as you plan for a major purchase.

(8) Have a savings account. No matter how big or small, a savings account is a backstop, an emotional as well as financial assist. Continue saving when you use credit. In fact, using credit and regularly building your savings nestegg should go on simultaneously — never one without the other.

(9) Don't blame anyone but yourself if you find you're sinking dangerously into debt. If you have permitted your spouse to go overboard on buying on credit without your knowledge and cooperation, it's your fault as much as the other's. If you have each gone off on your own and borrowed as you pleased, it's your fault as well as your partner's. You can outlast them when you try to shirk blame.

(10) When needing outside help if you do, then ask for assistance from any and all sources set up to aid you and never try to hide from your creditors.

Chrysler autos, chairman honored

DETROIT (UPI) — Chrysler Corp.'s two new small cars, Dodge Omni and Plymouth Horizon, were selected as "car of the year" and Chrysler chairman John J. Riccardo was named "man of the year" by Motor Trend magazine.

The autos, unveiled in November, are the first American-built production cars to employ transverse engines and front-wheel drive. While they are mechanically identical, they differ in trim and appointments.

Both are powered with Chrysler-built four-cylinder engines, designed to meet federal emission and fuel economy standards.

In making its decision, Motor Trend said it tested models both with a standard four-speed manual transmission and with an optional automatic transmission.

The magazine said both vehicles "are fun cars to drive, have excellent rear-seat passenger leg and headroom, are quiet and have a sports car feel that will satisfy the enthusiast and bring no complaints from those who like comfort."

Motor Trend singled out Riccardo for "his courageous and timely efforts in the development of the two models, which stand as the year's most significant engineering achievement in the domestic automotive scene.

"It is this type of corporate leadership that will guide the world's greatest national industry through the challenging and demanding years ahead," the magazine said.

Petitions call for Gooding recall drive

Lorayne Smith/Times-News

... Gooding county farmers sign petition

By LORAYNE O. SMITH
Times-News writer

GOODING — Preliminary signatures have been obtained to start a recall movement against two of the three Gooding County commissioners in wake of farmer dissatisfaction with the commission's weed policy.

Dick Strickland, Gooding developer, who is handling the petitions, said the necessary 20 preliminary signatures have been obtained from voters in each of the commissioner districts represented by John LeMoyne, commission chairman, and Jim Wilkins, another commissioner. Whether preliminary signatures for recalling the third commissioner, Rick Brailsford, had been obtained remained unclear this morning. The farmer in charge of circulating the petition, Jim Westfall, was unavailable for comment.

According to Idaho election laws, 20 signatures are necessary to obtain official recall petitions which must have signatures equalling 20 percent of the number of votes cast for that official in the last election.

If enough signatures are obtained and found to be registered voters, a recall election must be held.

The recall movement mushroomed Monday following a protest meeting attended by some 100 county farmers in the courthouse. The session with commissioners was called by Harold Henderson, farmer spokesman, to urge the officials to change their decision to auction the county-owned weed equipment this Saturday.

When commissioners said the planned auction would be held as scheduled, the angry farmers walked out of the meeting.

Now, in light of the angry mood of many of the rural residents and circulation of recall petitions, there is speculation if any local firms will purchase the equipment for fear of offending their farm customers.

Telephone inquiries have been received by the auctioneers from throughout the state indicating the equipment could be purchased and removed from Gooding County.

Gooding Farm Bureau board members conferred with commissioners Wednesday, urging them to lease the equipment to local private businesses, thereby assuring that it would remain in the county.

While many farmers disagree with the commissioners' decision to get out of the weed spraying business they were specifically asking that the equipment not be sold for a year to see how the new policy works out.

The dissatisfaction which promoted the recall movement stems as much from commissioners' attitude and disregard for citizen opinion as with their actual policy decision, Strickland said.

Commissioners say their policy change is a shift from providing the weed eradication service to more emphasis on enforcement.

Counties are authorized by state law to have a weed supervisor and see that noxious weeds are eradicated.

Many counties, like Gooding in the past, own and operate their own spraying equipment, charging farmers for the work done.

Spokesmen at the Idaho Department of Agriculture office in Boise said they believed the majority of Idaho counties do operate such a program, but some do not.

Lincoln County decided to go out of the spraying business last year. Some Gooding farmers have cited conditions in that county as proof private enterprise cannot do the job, but Lincoln Commissioner E. L. Ward said he is satisfied with the policy whereby farmers hire private firms to do their spraying or do it themselves.

Potato group seeks members

By KEN HODGE
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A controversial new potato marketing association splintering from Idaho's 15-year-old growers organization is ramrodding its membership drive across the state this week.

Representatives of Western Potato Growers of Idaho (WPGI) will hold 20 meetings in Idaho this week to sign up potato acreage for contract bargaining with potato processors later this spring, according to Vern Clinton, WPGI vice president.

More than 150 potato growers and other industry members attended two meetings at the Blue Lakes Inn in Twin Falls Tuesday to hear WPGI's elaborate plan for "supply management" of Idaho spuds and a complex bargaining strategy to bring better prices for Idaho spuds.

Formation of the new group has split the world famous Idaho potato industry — but some say not down the middle.

WPGI was formed by a group of Idaho growers, many of whom were originally members of Potato Growers of Idaho, the group which has handled potato bargaining and marketing in Idaho for 15 years.

"We recognize the contributions of the esisting potato bargaining organizations," Clinton, a Rupert potato grower, says. "But they have had their limitations in the past."

Clinton and Carl Reynolds, Bruneau potato grower, presented a detailed plan for a four-state bargaining association with strict membership requirements they hope will be able to get higher, more uniform contract prices from potato processors in the Northwest.

The federation outline is the result of a three-month study completed in September, 1977, by Boot, Allen and Hamilton, a nationwide consulting firm with offices in San Francisco.

The firm interviewed representatives of all levels of the potato industry in the Northwest and concluded potato growers need to tighten up their bargaining and control potato supply to guarantee higher prices from processors.

The plan has drawn fire from several quarters in the Idaho potato industry. Officials of the PGI do not support the plan and will not sign their organization up as a member.

PGI officials protest they have already formed a comprehensive marketing association which includes Oregon, Washington and Idaho called the Tri-State Potato Federation.

In addition, PGI members recently helped organize the Potato Marketing Association of North America, which includes potato associations from all over the continent.

PGI members generally agreed "two or three to one" to reject three major facets of the WPGI plan, according to Gerald Murphy, PGI general manager.

The questions rejected by PGI were:

—Should there be production or acreage controls on potato growers?

—Should any marketing cooperative have exclusive sales agency powers for potatoes consigned to it for bargaining and sale?

—Should there be a central bargaining agent on a regional basis?

Lloyd Walker of Twin Falls, attorney for PGI, says there is a question of legality posed by some of the proposals in the WPGI bargaining and marketing plan.

"The biggest problem is the allotment arrangement to attempt to control supply with grower allotments which in theory become property which can be sold," Walker says. "The Sherman Antitrust Act would not approve of such a thing, I don't think."

Walker says, however, some of the proposals in the WPGI plan have merit and "certainly ought to be considered and discussed."

Clinton says the WPGI program has met with favor in meetings held in Boise and at the meetings in Twin Falls Tuesday.

He said about 90 percent of those growers who attended the meetings and heard the plan indicated they would join the group.

Buhl man wounded

TWIN FALLS — Dennis Lauder of Buhl suffered a gun shot wound in the foot while coyote hunting in the Magic Water project area northwest of Buhl Tuesday.

County officers said the young man and a companion had gone hunting and were returning toward U.S. 30 on a county road when they stopped and started to get out of the car. The loaded rifle discharged while it was being removed from the vehicle, striking Lauder in the foot.

He was treated at Magic Valley Memorial Hospital and released.

Vehicle demolished

TWIN FALLS — A county sheriff's department vehicle was demolished and two persons treated for minor injuries early today as the result of a traffic accident at Fifth Avenue North and Fourth Street North in Twin Falls.

Deputy Sheriff Gilbert Sweezy, 36, Buhl, was traveling west on Fifth when a vehicle driven by Marion Terrasas Marinclarena, 25, Twin Falls, traveling north on Fourth Street North collided with the county car.

City police who investigated the accident reported the impact forced the county car into a utility pole which was broken off at the base and tossed over the car into the street.

Marinclarena was cited for driving while intoxicated, failure to yield right of way and driving a vehicle with no insurance.

'Crib death' ruled

TWIN FALLS — A four-month old baby girl died early today at her home of what authorities say was a "Crib death."

County Coroner Cloyce Edwards said Mary Elizabeth McGee was found dead in her crib about 8 a.m. today by her mother. He said an autopsy will be held later today at the request of doctors. Edwards said such deaths are common among infants with health problems.

City police reported the parents Mr. and Mrs. Jonathan McGee had put the child in the bed at 11:30 p.m. Wednesday and checked her at 2:30 a.m. this morning when she appeared to be fine.

The parents told officers the child was born prematurely and had a heart problem and had been frail since birth.

Edwards estimated the child had been dead about two hours when discovered by the parents.

Area board rejects complaint

By CHRISTOPHER BOGAN
Times-News writer

HAILEY — The Blaine County School Board Tuesday rejected a formal complaint filed by the Blaine County Education Association (BCEA), charging the school district violated the association's professional negotiations agreement.

The grievance concerned an incident in early August when the school board revised administrative salaries without BCEA negotiations. The BCEA claimed it is the sole bargaining association for all certified school personnel and that it negotiated salaries last spring.

Blaine County School Superintendent Norman Riggs said the board determined the BCEA's negotiation responsibilities and authority ended with the establishment of a teacher's salary schedule.

Since that salary schedule was established in the late spring, the board determined the BCEA had no authority over the August actions, and the board, therefore, rejected the BCEA's complaint, Riggs said.

"Board policy is not the domain of the teachers' union," the superintendent observed. "How the board utilizes the teacher's salary schedule to determine principals salaries is the board's responsibility and authority — in essence, that is board policy — and it is not the responsibility and authority of the BCEA."

BCEA president Mike Chitty declined to comment on the action until he had received a letter formally announcing the board's decision to the teacher's association.

In September, Chitty said the matter could lead to court action on the BCEA's part if the board did not respond or did not respond satisfactorily to the BCEA's grievance.

Now that the board has responded, it remains to be seen whether or not the BCEA will take any further action.

Riggs said another factor in the board's decision to reject the BCEA complaint was that the complaint exceeded the reasonable amount of time in which a grievance should be filed after an incident.

Although the board revised the administrative salaries in August, Riggs said the district's principals had proposed an administrative salary schedule last February and that at that time the BCEA didn't involve itself with negotiations.

The board, therefore, took the view that the BCEA complaint came six or seven months after the time it should have reasonably been filed, according to the superintendent.

Riggs also said the language of the district's master contract, which included principals and school administrators in the BCEA's negotiating unit, was poorly conceived. The BCEA primarily represents the district's teachers, and the contract language would have to be changed, Riggs said.

Winter celebration set in Blaine

By CHRISTOPHER BOGAN
Times-News writer

SUN VALLEY — "Fasching" may sound like an obscene word banned from conservative dictionaries, but really the word only means "carnival" and the Sun Valley/Ketchum area will celebrate its first Fasching for three days beginning Jan. 20.

With its earliest roots in ancient religious tradition, Fasching is a pre-Lent period of winter revelry, similar to Mardi Gras, that has been celebrated in Austria and Germany for generations.

Starting Friday afternoon, Jan. 20, and concluding Sunday evening, Jan. 22, Sun Valley, Elkhorn, Warm Springs and downtown Ketchum will celebrate their own Fasching or winter carnival, with parades, fireworks, street dances, a masked ball, alpine and cross country ski races and a community ice sculpture competition.

The three-day celebration, to be reigned over by a Prince and Princess of Fasching, has already stirred enough national attention to prompt NBC television and Playboy magazine to make plans to send correspondents to Sun Valley to cover the event.

Fasching has its roots in the ancient German tales and legends surrounding the worship of the Olympian God, Bacchus, protector of the vineyards.

In pagan ritual, peasants would join in village processions, dancing and donning horrific masks to frighten and drive off the winter demons. It was a time of joy, the prelude to spring planting.

But when Christianity spread through Germany in the Sixth Century, the pagan festival was banned and not until the 19th Century was the ancient celebration revived — this time as a holiday on the Christian calendar.

The winter carnival became known as Fasching and what had once been a spring fertility rite was transformed into a pre-Lent frolic like the Mardi Gras.

Sun Valley's first Fasching, the brain child of the Ketchum/Sun Valley Chamber of Commerce, promises to be a time of Bacchanalian revelry to rival even the older European celebration.

The opening ceremonies begin with a torchlight ski parade down Sun Valley's Dollar Mountain, in preparation for fireworks and the coronation of the Prince and Princess — Ketchum residents Chris Millspaugh and Nicki Foster — of Fasching on an ice-sculpted throne at the mountain's base.

A crazy hat and mask street dance follows later Friday night in Ketchum and Saturday will host cross country ski races and a T-shirt and beer drinking contest at Elkhorn. The judges for these latter events will be three Playboy Playmates flown in from Los Angeles, especially for Idaho's first Fasching.

A masked costume ball occurs later Saturday night at bars in Sun Valley, Elkhorn and Ketchum.

On Sunday, a dual slalom ski race and a baseball game played on skis will occur at Baldy Mountain, where the festival's closing ceremonies will take place with an awards presentation for the weekend's best masks, costumes and ice sculptures.

Work plan benefits young adults

By LORAYNE O. SMITH
Times-News writer

SHOSHONE — Ten young adults are gaining work experience through a new federal program which hopefully will help them get jobs on their own after a year.

Sean Sheehan, Bureau of Land Management employee who coordinates the new young adult corps for the Shoshone district, said there are now nine camps in Idaho employing some 50 persons from age 16 to 23.

The camp locations include Boise, Challis, Cottonwood, Burley, American Falls and Twin Falls.

This program, authorized just last July and only put into effect since November is similar to, but superior to the CETA project, according to Sheehan.

Whereas under the CETA operation, open to unemployed persons of any age, the governmental unit where they are hired is more or less "stuck with them," the Young Adult Corps program has "lots of latitude," Sheehan said.

"If they don't measure up in their work or have lots of absenteeism we just lay them off," the coordinator said. "They have to fill their work commitment, and they can only stay in this program for 12 months."

The young people are paid minimum wage, $2.65 per hour.

The idea is to take youths who otherwise can't find jobs and don't have education in special fields and give them work experience.

This experience will then provide good references for another employer. Lack of work experience is one of the main things keeping many youths out of the job field, Sheehan said.

The program operates through the Department of Labor and Department of Interior and is implemented through presently existing agencies such as National Park Service, Forest Service, Fish and Wildlife Service and the BLM.

Youths can work for private organizations such as churches and are not confined to governmental units.

Currently five youths are painting the Shoshone High School gymnasium, and the other five are going to build a carport at the rear of the Senior Citizens Center here.

The program is designed so 70 percent of the youth's time is spent on conservation projects 30 percent or civic projects.

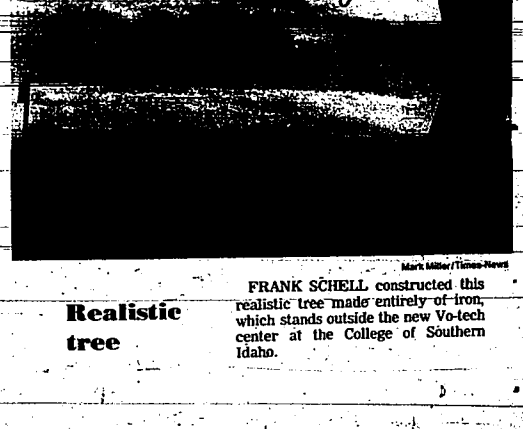

During winter this ratio is hard to keep, but several projects Sheehan plans will involve conservation.

These include feeding elk in Ketchum and building mangers for the Fish and Game Department to use in the feeding.

Projects planned for spring will include work at the Fish and Game Department game farm at Jerome and possibly work in connection with archeological projects operated through the BLM.

Purpose of the program, Sheehan said, is not simply to provide stop-gap work for a year, but to instill the work ethic in the youths and expose them to the many possible fields they could pursue with more education and training.

In some states resident camps are planned for youths from urban areas, but the Shoshone coordinator said no resident camps are planned for Idaho.

Emma M. Silcock

JEROME — Emma M. Silcock, 78, Jerome, died Tuesday morning at Magic Valley Manor in Wendell following an extended illness.

Born April 16, 1899, in Spanish Fork, Utah, she attended school at Palmyra, Utah. During her early teens and 20s she acted as a nurse and then married Ren Silcock at Rigby on Nov. 13, 1922.

The marriage was solemnized in the Salt Lake Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints Temple Feb. 7, 1923.

Mr. and Mrs. Silcock returned to Spanish Fork for three years prior to moving to Burley where they lived until 1934. They lived in Buhl one year, moved to Wendell in 1936 and came to Jerome in 1943 where they farmed until 1951. They lived in California for eight years, returning to Jerome in 1959.

Survivors are her husband, Jerome, four sons, Rex and Duane Silcock, Twin Falls; Gene Silcock in the Merchant Marines, and Gale Silcock, Fresno, Calif.; two daughters, Mrs. Shirley (Dean) Lawrence, Yerrington, Nev., and Mrs. Darlene (Lou) Englebrecht, Mesa, Ariz.; 19 grandchildren and 20 great-grandchildren.

She was preceded in death by one grandson.

The funeral for Mrs. Silcock will be conducted at 2 p.m. Saturday in the Fourth Ward LDS Chapel on North Lincoln by Bishop Russell Woolley. Burial will follow in the Jerome Cemetery.

Friends may call at Hove Funeral Chapel Friday and until 1:30 p.m. Saturday.

Applications studied

BURLEY — A new executive manager for the Burley Chamber of Commerce will be announced Jan. 26 at the chamber's annual dinner, according to President Dee Nelson.

Nelson said the person is being chosen by a six-member screening board from the 21 applications for the position, which opened recently with the retirement of Agnes Anderson, executive secretary for 20 years. Several local residents applied for the post, he added, saying the applicants come from 11 western states.

The annual dinner will be held at the Burley Ramada Inn at 7 p.m. on Jan. 26.

Cold front moves across US

By United Press International

A vicious combination of snow, sleet and ice barreled out of the Southwest today, threatening to pour a new coat of winter as far east as the Carolinas and as far north as Michigan.

The collision of a cold front with moist Gulf of Mexico air sent a roaring blast of thunderstorms across the Plains and Mississippi Valley and threatened to hit the Great Lakes region by tonight.

The storm hit hardest in Arkansas, where all roads were listed as hazardous. Mount Ida, Ark., reported more than 5 inches of snow and sleet and more was expected today.

At Hope, Ark., the weight of sleet and ice crushed seven poultry houses containing more than 100,000 chickens.

"We may have trouble getting equipment in," said Lloyd Hendrix, an official with Corn Belt of Arkansas. He said farmers likely would discover dozens of other cave-ins today.

"This could run into millions of dollars of damage in a hurry. It could create a disaster area for us," Hendrix said. Chickens are the area's biggest business, with yearly production of 30 million to 40 million.

The storm sealed northern Texas under a sheet of ice and caused so many accidents that Fort Worth ran out of ambulances. A chain reaction caused a 14-car pileup on a Dallas freeway and at least one fatality was blamed on icy roads.

"I'd like to get out there to help the people, but I'd lose my job," said William Perkins, a clerk at a self-service station on busy Stemmons Freeway. "This is the worst weather we've had. It's all white outside. It's sleeting real hard."

Travel advisories were posted from northern Texas to Tennessee and from Kansas to Illinois. Winter storm watches were issued for today from Alabama to North Carolina and from Kentucky north to Illinois, Indiana, Ohio and lower Michigan.

The frigid blast that sent temperatures plunging below zero in the Northeast abated today, but demand for power remained high and many utilities continued their cutbacks in output.

Low temperatures reached a relatively warm 19 at Buffalo, N.Y., 22 at Atlanta, Ga., and 12 at Chicago today. A low of 52 at Miami appeared to mark the end of the freeze that damaged some vegetables but left the citrus crop unscathed.

The slight warming trend brought little help for utilities plagued by dwindling natural gas reserves and frozen stockpiles of coal. Voltage cutbacks forced several Ohio industries to lay off workers and cut production. Buckeye Steel in Columbus laid off 550 workers Wednesday.

The Tennessee Valley Authority reported another record demand — 21.9 million kilowatts.

"We're running everything we've got as hard as we can," John Van Mol of the TVA information office said Wednesday. He said problems with frozen coal are critical, because the miners' strike has reduced coal shipments greatly.

Warmer temperatures came too late for a pair of elderly Missouri men. Their bodies were found Wednesday in a farmhouse near the Mississippi River town of Charleston. They apparently froze to death last week in the house, which was heated only by a coal stove.

Further warming could cause flooding in the North, where ice jams were preventing floodwaters from rampaging downstream.

Ice jams were holding back floodwaters in south central Maine, where more than 130 residents were forced from their homes near the Androscoggin and Kennebec rivers. A 10-mile jam on the Muskegon River in Michigan forced the evacuation of a dozen families and threatened flash flooding.

Mistrial declared in Twin Falls suit

TWIN FALLS — A Twin Falls housewife who is representing herself against her two former attorneys in a lawsuit in Fifth District Court will be starting her case all over again at a later date.

A mistrial was declared Wednesday morning in the case of Roberta (Wilson) Carter against William Hollifield and Kent Taylor, attorneys who represented her in a divorce action against her former husband Michael Wilson.

When the law firm filed action against her to collect an unpaid bill for services, Mrs. Carter filed a counter suit, charging they failed to adequately represent her and, therefore, did not earn the fee.

Mrs. Carter, who said she had never seen a jury trial until this week, undertook to present her own case because she could not find an attorney who would go into court against the law firm and its attorney, Melvin Edwards.

When one of the 12 jurors became ill Wednesday morning and had to be excused, Judge Ward told the plaintiff and defendants they could stipulate to continuing the case before the 11 jurors or a mistrial would have to be declared. Mrs. Carter, the first queried on the stipulation said she could not stipulate to the matter and a mistral was declared by the court.

The case will have to be rescheduled at a later date, and records at the court show there is not a vacant date for several months unless a case on the calendar should vacate.

Mrs. Carter had called a number of witnesses Monday and Tuesday in an attempt to show her attorneys did not fully check her former husband's financial condition during the divorce action. She alleged he used community funds to purchase a mobile home. Mrs. Carter also is asking damages on grounds the attorneys pressured her former employer and as a result she was forced to leave her job as a real estate agent.

Rain, snow hamper Idaho travelers

BOISE (UPI) — Winter continued its assault on Idaho motorists today with more rain and snow in many areas of the state, requiring tire chains for safe travel in some areas.

By road, this was the report from the state Department of Transportation and Law Enforcement:

Interstate 80N — King Hill to Burley, Cotterel to Utah line, raining.

State Highway 68, U.S. 20-26 — Tollgate to Carey, snow floor, snowing; Craters of the Moon to Arco, broken snow floor.

U.S. 93 — Twin Falls to Nevada line, fog; Shoshone, raining; Hailey to Stanley, snow floor, snowing; Challis to Salmon, snow floor; Salmon to Lost Trail Pass, snow floor, snowing.

U.S. 95 — Weiser to New Meadows, snow floor, snowing; Whitebird Hill to Craigmont, snow floor; Culdesac Hill in Lewiston hill, raining; Lewiston to Lummer, snowing; Plummer, icy spots, fog; Coeur d'Alene, icy; Sandpoint to Bonners Ferry, icy spots.

State Highway 55 — Horseshoe Bend Hill, icy spots; Banks to Round Valley, raining; Round Valley to New Meadows, snow floor, snowing.

Twin Falls County shifts precinct lines

TWIN FALLS — Boundaries on many of the Twin Falls county voting precincts have been changed and voters are urged to check their registration with the county clerk's office to avoid finding they are not registered at election time.

Gary Whitwell, county clerk, said the precinct 4 in Twin Falls has been eliminated, but that doesn't mean residents of the old precinct 4 can't vote or have been lost.

"They have been transferred to other precincts and should contact their registrars or the clerk's office to learn where they will be relocated," Whitwell said.

With the removal of one Twin Falls precinct, another has been added in Kimberly. Precinct 17 has been completely relocated and many of the rural precincts have new boundaries.

Whitwell said the realignment has been made along section lines rather than in the center of the sections. In this way, road designations and precinct boundaries will coincide, he said.

"There never was any organized plan in the county precincts. As a city grew, a new precinct was often added by cutting a large one in half. As a result Precinct 15 light be on one side of town and 16 on the opposite," Whitwell said.

"If a voter moves from one precinct to another, he or she must reregister. If the precinct moves then all of the voters who find themselves in a new precinct will have to reregister," the clerk said.

Group seeks members

After the second day of WPGI's membership drive, according to Clinton, his group is "over a third of the way there."

"We are pleased with the reception of the plan," he says. "I think they're buying this program because for the first time in 200 years, they are being offered assurance of a profit before planting."

Walker disputed the membership figures, saying he could not even get a membership agreement to inspect.

"They don't actually have a membership agreement available," he says. "The reason is that you can't draft one. It looks like all they are doing is putting together a major to dependent contract."

Judge survives ouster attempt

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — Judicial proceedings aimed at ousting appellate Judge Charles Galbreath, who once wrote a letter to "Hustler" magazine saying he enjoyed reading pornography, were dropped today.

The Judicial Standards Commission said it had "terminated all procedures" against Galbreath, a judge on the State Court of Criminal Appeals. The announcement came shortly before a court hearing was to begin on a suit by Galbreath aimed at blocking a commission ouster hearing later today.

The commission gave no reason for dropping action against Galbreath.

Galbreath had claimed in a suit filed in Chancery Court that the commission could not proceed in its ouster action because it had violated the state's "Sunshine Law" requiring open meetings.

Galbreath appeared surprised by the announcement.

"I'm gratified, of course, that this painful episode has been terminated after the hearing had lasted only minutes," he said. "Now I can get on with my previously announced plans."

Galbreath had previously said he will retire from the bench at the end of his term of office and run for the legislature.

One of the six commission charges against Galbreath concerned a letter he wrote on state stationery to "Hustler" magazine that was later published, in which Galbreath praised publisher Larry Flynt and said he enjoyed reading pornography.

Another highly publicized charge involved a jaywalking incident last summer in Columbus, Ohio. Galbreath was allegedly intoxicated when he and Flynt's chauffeur tried on June 25, 1977 to take a woman to the judge's hotel room. Vice squad officers said th woman would be "unwelcome in such a hotel."

The judge was subsequently arrested for jaywalking and taken to jail in handcuffs. The commission charged the incident embarrassed the citizens of Tennessee and the state judiciary.

U.S. court approves suits

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court ruled 5-3 Wednesday that foreign countries are entitled to sue U.S. corporations for triple damages for violating antitrust laws.

The decision was a blow to six drug companies fighting an antitrust action against them by India, Iran and the Philippines for alleged price-fixing in the sale of antibiotics.

The drug firms appealed to the high court after losing out in the 8th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Cincinnati.

The Clayton Act provides that "any person ... injured in his business or property by anything forbidden in the antitrust laws ... shall recover threefold damages."

At issue in this case was whether Congress intended to include foreign nations among "persons" able to seek triple damages.

Justice Potter Stewart, writing for the majority, said a foreign country otherwise entitled to sue in American courts is a "person" within the meaning of the antitrust act. He said Congress intended the word to have a broad meaning in light of the antitrust law's extensive remedial purpose.

"Congress did not intend to make the treble-damage remedy available only to consumers in our own country," Stewart said. When a foreign nation enters U.S. commercial markets as a purchaser of goods or services, he said, it can be victimized by anti-competitive practices just as surely as a private person.

Chief Justice Warren Burger, in a dissent joined by Justices Lewis Powell and William Rehnquist, said: "The resolution of the delicate and important policy issue of giving more than 150 foreign countries the benefits and remedies enacted to protect American consumers should be left to the Congress and the executive."

Burger called the majority's ruling an "undisguised exercise of legislative power."

Justice Harry Blackmun did not take part in the case — the only one decided by the court today.

The drug companies which filed the appeal are Pfizer Inc., American Cyanamid Corp., Briston-Myers, Squibb, Olin, and the Upjohn Co.

Basque violence erupts

MADRID, Spain (UPI) — The worst violence in three months hit Spain's restive Basque region Wednesday when police and suspected separatist guerrillas fought an hours-long gunbattle in the city of Pamplona.

Police said one police inspector and two suspected members of "Basque Homeland and Liberty" — known as the ETA — were killed. The national news agency Cifra said that an unknown number of persons was injured.

ETA is a left-wing separatist guerrilla group with a long record of killings, bombings and kidnappings in its campaign for Basque independence.

Cifra said police continued the siege of a building suspected of serving as an ETA hideout.

Hill route cited

LEWISTON, Idaho (UPI) — Highway District Engineer Marvin Lotspeich, Lewiston, said today the new Lewiston Hill route has been nominated to the National Society of Professional Engineers as the "Outstanding Engineering Achievement of 1977."

The Lewiston Hill route was opened to traffic Oct. 28.

The highway replaced 8 miles of 25-foot wide highway having 60 horizontal curves and a posted speed of 35 miles per hour.

Lotspeich said the new route is shorter, wider, straighter and faster and includes a three-level interchange at the bottom of the hill to better serve traffic.

Built at a cost of $14.2 million, he said, the project is expected to repay the traveling public much more in reduced operating costs and safety benefits.

The nomination noted the location, design and construction of the new highway is an excellent example of modern highway engineering achievement. It starts at an elevation of 740 feet above sea level and rises to 2,800 feet in less than seven miles out of the Clearwater-Snake River drainage to the Palouse plateau.

ROBERT C. BLANZ

'Phone' pioneers to meet

TWIN FALLS — Robert C. Blanz of Boise, vice president and general manager of Mountain Bell operations in Idaho, will be the key-note speaker during the Jan. 19-20 mid-term assembly of Idaho Telephone Pioneers in Twin Falls.

The assembly to be held in the Blue Lakes Inn will feature membership workshops, reports on various community service projects and nomination of new officers.

Blanz, formerly with AT&T in New York City, assumed the Idaho post this past November. He will speak during a banquet the evening of Jan. 19. District Mountain Bell Manager Ken Mann, Twin Falls, will speak to the group Jan. 20.

A highlight of the meeting will be reports on community service projects. The Telephone Pioneers, a national organization of 500,000 members with 18 years or more service, has long been noted for its contributions of technical equipment and devices for the benefit of the handicapped.

A current statewide project involves the acquisition of used teletypes for use by the deaf throughout the state. In Twin Falls, the Magic Valley Pioneer club is providing two talking eye stuffed animals to the special education class at Robert Stuart Junior High School.

Pioneer officers from a three-state area, representing the Skyline chapter (Idaho, Utah and Montana) will attend as well as Idaho (Sawtooth Council) officers.

Art Rowe of Boise, Sawtooth Council president, will preside over the two-day assembly. The Magic Valley Pioneer clubs headed by Sondra Claiborn, active club president, and Thomas Newbry, life member (retirees) club president, are hosting the event.

Also on this day in history:

In 1943, the wartime Office of Price Administration said standard frankfurters would be replaced by "victory sausages" consisting of meat and soybean meal.

In 1970, Dr. Martin Sweig, suspended administrative assistant to House Speaker John McCormack, was indicted on charges of defrauding federal agencies.

In 1971, a federal grand jury indicted the Rev. Philip Berrigan and five other persons, including a nun and two other priests, on charges of plotting to kidnap then-presidential adviser Henry Kissinger.

In 1976, the U.N. Security Council voted 11 to 1 to seat the Palestine Liberation Organization for its debate on the Middle East. The United States cast the only dissenting vote.

A thought for the day: French poet Jacques Delille said: "Fate chooses our relatives; we choose our friends."

PUBLIC NOTICE
Services For Persons Unable to Pay Therefor
TWIN FALLS VALLEY MEMORIAL HOSPITAL 850 ADDISON AVENUE WEST, TWIN FALLS, ID 83301, in concurrence with the Department of Health and Welfare, has established the sum of $7,610.00 as the level of uncompensated services to be made available by this facility during the period from OCTOBER 1, 1977, to SEPTEMBER 30, 1978.
This determination has been made pursuant to the requirements of the Regulations of the Public Health Service, Department of Health, Education and Welfare and the applicable provisions of the 1978 Idaho Hospital and Medical Facilities Construction Act.
"Uncompensated Services" means services available in the facility which are made available for persons unable to pay therefor without charge or at a charge which is less than the reasonable cost of such services. The level of such services is measured by the difference between the amount paid by such persons for the services and the reasonable cost thereof.
The records and documents, on the basis of which the above level of uncompensated services was established, are available for public inspection during regular business hours at the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare, Bureau of Health Planning and Resource Development, Boise, Idaho.

The East Half of the East Half (E½E¼), Section 36, Township 16 South, Range 17 East, Boise Meridian, containing 160 acres, more or less. APPRAISED PRICE: $13,920.00, plus lessee improvements for fence in the amount of $1,761.
No one individual, company, or corporation may purchase more than 320 acres of grazing land in lieu school land from the State. This 320-acre limitation upon purchase of grazing land is not applicable to absolute, not an annual limit. Any individual, company, or corporation intending to bid at the sale will be required to sign an affidavit to the effect that they have not exceeded this acreage limitation by previous purchases from the State, nor will they if they are the successful bidder at this sale, and that they are not attempting to make any such purchase for, or on behalf of, any person, company, or corporation which will, if the purchaser exceed the 320-acre limitation. Those contemplating bidding on this sale may determine their status on this matter by contacting the Boise office of the Department of Lands at least seven days prior to the sale date.
TERMS OF SALE
This land to be sold in Four Units as listed above, and no bid of less than the appraised price will be accepted.
Purchaser will be solely responsible for any taxes levied. The State assumes no responsibility for providing access to the land being sold.
One Tenth (1/10) of the purchase price and interest at Seven & One-Half Percent (7½%) on Balance of principal for remainder of year, cash on day of sale, balance in Twenty (20) annual installments of One-Tenth of principal and Seven & One-Half Percent (7½%) interest, (personal checks, certified checks or cash) money orders acceptable as cash). Annual installments are due at the beginning of each year after purchase, principal and interest payable in advance.
Each bidder is required to make a deposit with the selling agent in the amount or 10% of the appraised value of the land at or before the time of making his first bid, as a guarantee that if he is the successful bidder he will execute with the State of Idaho a contract for the purchase of said land according to the terms under which it is offered in the advertisement for sale by the State of Idaho. Should the successful bidder fail to complete a contract for purchase of these lands, the full amount of said deposit will be immediately declared forfeited to the State of Idaho, without further action on the part of the State, as liquidated damages for such failure to complete the sale.
All deposits of unsuccessful bidders will be returned on day of sale. Purchaser will pay advertising costs in two newspapers in-full on day of sale. Lessee's improvements to be paid for in full on day of sale.
All minerals rights, including sand, gravel, pumice and all Geothermal Resources are reserved, to the State of Idaho.
All sales are made subject to any valid interfering rights which may have existed prior to date of sale except those for which allowance is made herewith.
BY ORDER OF THE STATE BOARD OF LAND COMMISSIONERS.

The gang's all here

CONTRARY to earlier rumor, here's proof College of Southern Idaho will have a full team with which to resume its basketball season against the ISU jayvees here Friday night. Rumors circulated through the area prior to Christmas that most would not return.

New offense, defense and player help CSI begin post-holiday year

TWIN FALLS — College of Southern Idaho returns to basketball wars Friday night to begin perhaps as big a week as it will face all season.

And fans will see three different things, two of them Friday night and the third sometime next week.

Coach Mike Mitchell, with all his troops back but frosh Craig Cayruth who is not scheduled to return until Friday due to a death in the family, has been spending the time installing a new motion offense. He also plans to turn more to a pressure defense for his team which currently is third best defensively in the nation.

Coach Mitchell is hoping the third surprise will be the most pleasant. He will be 6-6 incoming freshman Andrew Laurence from South Bend, Ind.

"He will be immediately eligible because this will be his first opportunity to enroll in a college after high school graduation," Coach Mitchell said.

"I haven't seen him but many of my friends in coaching have and they all say he is a player. If he is a good one, he will provide a lot of flexibility we haven't had so far," the coach said. Laurence is expected to arrive in Twin Falls Saturday.

Idaho State's jayvees will provide the competition Friday and that is one the Eagles should win.

But next week the Eagles face a gauntlet of Yakima, Wash.; Utah Tech of Provo, and Ricks College on Monday, Tuesday and Friday, respectively.

Yakima currently is running 9-1 and will be considerably taller than the Eagles.

They list four men 6-7 to 6-9, one from Toledo and the other three from Washington, D.C. The majority of the Indians' roster is from the east.

Utah Tech similarly is running well at 10-1 and thus far has split with Ricks. Utah Tech will return a familiar face in Scott Labrum who played for the Eagles last year. He has had a couple of 30-point nights for the Utah club.

Friday is the game that matters, however, since it is one of six during the year that helps establish the entrants and site of the regional tournament.

"I watched Ricks play last week. They're going with the two big men all the time now . . . both 6-9. Ricks can be a formidable opponent," Coach Mitchell said.

"I know one thing," he summed it up. "We will have to play well in all three games next week or we could come out with three losses."

"There are two things we are going to do differently in the second semester," he continued. "The first is this new motion offense. The one we tried is a perfect offense if you have two wing men who are interchangeable and can shoot the ball equally well. We weren't able to develop that in the first part of the season."

"So we'll go with this motion offense which keeps everyone pretty active and it should be difficult for bigger teams to defend."

"Defensively, I plan on using a lot more pressure . . . putting Curtis (Rayford) and (Jerry) Williams into a full court press and anyone else the other team decides to bring up to help," Coach Mitchell said.

"I realize we can't wear Williams out defensively because he is the heart of our scoring offense. But (David) Ferguson can fill in for Jerry. It's just something I feel we have to do."

Overall the Eagles remain in about the same condition as they were prior to Christmas. Apparently the foot injury is something that Rayford simply will have to play with. Chris Barter reinjured his knee in practice Tuesday but was playing on it well Wednesday. It has kept him on the bench most of the year.

"I'm just afraid that both those injuries will be chronic now," Mitchell said.

Cards want No. 1 choice for Coryell

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — The St. Louis Cardinals will allow coach Don Coryell to go to Los Angeles in exchange for a first round draft pick, it was announced Weednesday. However, Coryell said the Rams would not go for that kind of deal.

"If I can't get free, they'll (the Rams) get another coach," Coryell said. "If I were them, there's no way I'd give up a first-round draft choice."

Asked by reporters about the possibility of Coryell remaining with St. Louis if he cannot find another coaching job, he said, "If I want to eat, yes."

Coryell said the major consideration in his desire to leave St. Louis is his wife's health.

"She just doesn't like cold weather," Coryell said. "She's a beach nut. She likes to run the beaches, swim and be out of doors."

He said the Cardinals originally demanded two first-round draft picks from the Rams for his release but later changed it to one.

Calling the coaching job with the Rams "a real opportunity," Coryell said, "They probably have more of a chance of making the Super Bowl than we have of making the playoffs here."

"If the Rams are interested in Coryell, they know what the price is," Joe Sullivan, Cardinal director of operations, said. "I suppose that when a coach is under contract that a deal can be made quite easily."

Sullivan said trading a coach for a draft pick is not unprecedented. He said it was Rams' owner Carroll Rosenbloom who set the precedent as owner of the Baltimore Colts.

"Rosenbloom complained bitterly that he only received a first-round draft choice for Shula," Sullivan said, referring to the deal which sent Don Shula from Baltimore to Miami. "He said a winning football coach was worth a great deal more than a first-round draft choice."

Rosenbloom also told the Detroit Lions this year they would have to pay a stiff price if they wanted Los Angeles Coach Chuck Knox. The Lions decided upon Monte Clark instead and Knox signed Wednesday with the Buffalo Bills.

"There's no doubt that Don is a winning coach," Sullivan added. "But he hasn't been to a Super Bowl so I think a first-round draft choice would be adequate."

Coryell, 52, has a contract to coach the Cardinals through 1980. But he apparently burned his bridges behind him when he skipped a meeting with Cardinal owner Bill Bidwill Tuesday and flew to Los Angeles to discuss an offer to coach the Rams.

Coryell, whose teams won NFC East championships in 1974 and 1975, had enjoyed the support of his players and the public in his effort to gain more say in drafting and higher paychecks for players and coaches. But that support disappeared when the coach refused what was said to be a good offer from Bidwill.

Even Jim Hart, whose career was resurrected when Coryell arrived in St. Louis five years ago and tabbed Hart the No. 1 quarterback, says Coryell now would be better off elsewhere. Hart said it would be difficult for Coryell to regain the respect of the public and the players.

"Initially, it was just toward the defense," Hart said of Coryell's quote that only two Cardinal defenders could start for the New York Giants. "But it's everybody now."

When Coryell refused Bidwill's latest offer, it became evident that it was not only the owner's policies that had caused his discontent. Coryell's family has been unhappy with the cold weather in St. Louis since moving from San Diego and the coach has said he would seek a warmer climate to work in.

The Rams have acknowledged they would like to sign Coryell but issued a statement Wednesday afternoon saying they would not make a move for at least 10 days.

"We will be talking to several coaches," Rosenbloom said. "I am not at liberty to comment who they are, but we will now accelerate our search."

Judge's co-ed athletics ruling draws more negative response

CINCINNATI (UPI) — Negative reaction poured in from sports officials Wednesday to a federal judge's order that high school girls be permitted to play alongside boys in contact sports such as football and basketball.

The head-shaking ranged all the way from the professional to the high school level.

"It's amusing," laughed Cincinnati Bengals assistant general manager Mike Brown. "If the law says that, then the law is a little bit silly."

"It's a bad thing," moaned Tom Thacker, who coaches a women's college basketball team. "A few women would be able to compete alongside men, but the great majority couldn't."

"Tackle football is no place for girls," declared high school football coach Frank Howe. "There is a difference between girls and boys, thank God."

The strong reaction came in the wake of U.S. District Court Judge Carl Rubin's decision in Dayton this week that current bans on coeducational high school teams in contact sports are unconstitutional.

Rubin said such bans may even be keeping some girl somewhere from becoming the greatest quarterback in football history.

"I don't even think a federal judge could be so foolish to say that," chuckled Brown, who quarterbacked in college and became a lawyer before helping organize the Bengals' pro football team.

"I don't doubt that the law actually requires what the judge has ruled, but while it may be legally correct, as far as real life is concerned, I think it's make believe.

"I've never seen a woman yet who is going to stand up to the physical pounding that football requires. But maybe the judge is aware of some prospect out there."

Thacker has a unique perspective from which to view the judge's ruling. He was a star player on the University of Cincinnati's national championship basketball team of the early 1960s and now coaches the school's women's basketball team.

"Some sports I think should be sexually mixed — horse racing, tennis, polo, volleyball, maybe baseball — but I don't think enough women have the strength and endurance to compete with or against boys in contact sports," said Thacker.

"A few women could do it — one of my players last year could beat some men in one-on-one. But most women couldn't do it. I think the best course to follow is to give women's sports the same facilities and financial support as men and let them compete among themselves."

Figured Howe, the football coach at Columbus Northland High School, "The judge is way out of line. He doesn't understand that the physiology of girls doesn't equip them to play football with boys.

"I would be wrong to take the chance of letting a girl play," he said. "I don't think I'd have a leg to stand on if (she) got hurt. Her parents could sue me."

Other high school football coaches echoed similar reactions to the possibility of girl football players, one even complaining, "I don't think the boys would treat her like a lady."

Frowning Knox says he's happy at Buffalo

LONG BEACH, Calif. (UPI) — Chuck Knox claimed he was happy but he didn't look it.

Reporters who showed up to interview Knox Wednesday after it was announced he was leaving the Los Angeles Rams to coach the Buffalo Bills found him unsmiling and unwilling to expand on the situation.

He said he obtained permission from Rams' owner Carroll Rosenbloom during the weekend to talk to Buffalo owner Ralph Wilson and made his decision to leave Los Angeles late Tuesday night.

"Buffalo will be quite a challenge but the opportunity was too good to pass up," Knox said. "I leave with no bitterness. I wish the Rams the best and I hope they win the Super Bowl.

"The Rams were losing when we got here so our goals were to win the division (the NFC West) and make the playoffs. We did that each year. But it is disappointing we didn't make the Super Bowl and I think we did that."

Knox, 45, met with reporters at the Rams' Blair Field training site in Long Beach. He steadfastly denied he had had a rift with Rosenbloom.

After the Rams' 14-7 playoff loss to the Minnesota Vikings Dec. 26, the Rams announced Knox had signed a new five-year contract and Knox had said, "I want to be around. My future is here."

Asked if it was unusual to sign a new contract and then leave, Knox replied tersely, "Yes, I guess it is unusual."

Knox, a former Detroit Lions' assistant coach, compiled a 54-15-1 record — the best winning percentage among all active NFL coaches —and won five NFC West championships in five seasons at Los Angeles. But the Rams never made it to the Super Bowl and Rosenbloom was said to be critical of his head coach's lack of imagination on offense.

Prior to the Rams signing Knox, Rosenbloom was asked about his coaching situation and said, "We're not going to decide now. We're going to think it over and we want the little boy to think it over."

Rosenbloom apparently was mad that Knox had refused to sign the new five-year contract during the season. There also were reportedly ill feelings between Knox and Rosenbloom from a year ago when the Detroit Lions wanted to talk to Knox and Rosenbloom refused.

At that time, Rosenbloom said he wanted compensation for his coach. On Wednesday, he released Knox from his contract.

Knox reportedly signed a sixyear contract at $200,000 a season with the Bills, who went 5-23 under two different head coaches the past two years.

He said he did not know what would happen to his Ram coaching staff of Tom Catlin, Elijah Pitts, Ray Prochaska, Kay Stephenson, Lionel Taylor and Jim Wagstaff.

Now You Know

Those four physical ailments suffered most frequently by Marine Corps recruits are onychocryptosis, bulli, neculated tyloma and callousity otherwise known as ingrown toenails, blisters, corns and callouses.

Old A-1 tourney format still seems best

TWIN FALLS — Ever since the district A-1 tournament settled into a three-team affair under the current format, everyone has been trying to figure out a better deal.

The basic complaint about the current format is that on more than a few occasions, the participating teams do not face one another every year.

LARRY HOVEY

A new one currently is under consideration by Twin Falls, Minico and Burley but it has a horrendous hole in it that would necessitate either a double bye or a coin flip in midstream.

The new one would follow the "bye" rotation principle of previous years but make a big change for the team holding the bye in that it would be required to play the next two games. It does assure that all the teams will have played at least once before someone is eliminated. It also, however, assures a double jeopardy clause for that team but immediately tells it not to worry if things don't turn out well.

Take this year for instance.

Twin Falls is scheduled to open at Minico with Burley having the bye into the championship semi-finals. The winner of that first game will play at Burley the second night but regardless of what happens, Burley then is scheduled to meet the first-night loser.

So follow out the possibility. If the first night winner wins the second night there is no problem. If Burley would win both its games there is no problem. But if Burley won the first game and lost the second one — which would be totally possible in this year of apparently closerated teams — it would put everyone at one loss and nothing decided.

If you return Burley to the championship bracket — into the championship game — it would be a double buy for the Bobcats. If you flipped a coin there is no advantage to the new format.

The added problem here is the enducement to lose a game and/or rest the horses. If the bye team is automatically re-seeded back into the championship finals, that team will know that its opposition will have to play three straight nights to beat it. So, after winning the first one, it can run in the manager and student scorekeeper and the rest of the third-team. Losing costs it nothing.

Now, please, dearhearts. Don't say that would never happen. Because if you do either you have a poor memory or you weren't around here about 21 years ago. Anything that puts a premium on losing is a poor rule.

When the currently used format was first adopted it was taken as the only matter of course after many dozens of hours of figuring by many individuals both independently and collectively.

The currently used format is very easy to follow if you remember the basic rules on home games. If two teams have met previously in the tournament, the game is played at the opposite site. If both have had the home court advantage once, it moves to neutral.

If two teams meet who have not played previously it will be played opposite of the team which had the last home game in the tournament.

That follows easily. Again using this year. If Twin Falls should beat Minico in the first game, Twin Falls goes to Burley. Now say that Burley lost to Twin Falls in the second game and must play Minico. That game automatically goes to Rupert because they haven't met previously and Burley had the last home game.

The rule substantially is this: Since one team will have the bye and the home floor designation the second night, the rule thereafter strives very hard to prevent that team from returning to its home court again. The bye team should never be home again until it has been defeated once.

Now for the third reason for the current format. It was set up with the team last having the bye having to travel. The team with the current bye receives both the bye and the home court advantage in the semi-finals to relieve some of the logistics for preparing for the game.

First, it can be announced well in advance of where the first two games will be played to help fans with any travel or attendance plans they have. Secondly, it would prove rather irksome to have two sets of ticket sellers, takers, crowd control, scoring-bench personnel, etc., on Standby for Saturday and one of them being called off.

Once you remember the basics on home court rules, the current format is easily the most workable of the myriad plans we've seen. And by using those rules, the easiest for everyone to follow.

'Got a couple of "they said its" in closing.

Kimberly sophomore Coach Gordon Hogan surveying the scoreboard last week after Filer whipped his charges 81-12. "Six points in the first half, six points in the second half. How's that for offensive consistency?"

Late in Twin Falls' win against Nampa Friday night, Mario Salinas, who just seconds earlier had missed two free throws, was in a jump ball situation.

During a timeout prior to that tip, Coach John Astorqua said to Salinas "you just missed those two free throws so you owe us this jump ball."

Salinas won and so did Twin Falls. Afterward, 5-9 Mario confided "I didn't know I could jump that high."

This one isn't local but we like it because it could be applied to so many players everywhere.

Michigan State Coach Judd Heathcoate was asked to comment on his super frosh "Magic" Johnson.

"He does everything well," Heathcoate said, "except when the other team has the ball."

Bruins invade Meridian, entertain Boise Saturday

TWIN FALLS — The Minico Spartans try to break the road jinx while Twin Falls has a pair of "I hate these kind of games" scheduled in the Southern Idaho Conference this weekend.

Minico has a 5-3 record and has played five games at home and three on the road. And now you know where the phrase "road jinx" comes from.

The Spartans' task is not easy. They will be at Highland which is a tough enough place to win a ball game under any condition let alone the fact that the Rams have a good ball club and will be taller than the Spartans underneath.

Saturday Minico comes home to play the short but inexplicable pesky Bonneville Bees.

Meanwhile, Twin Falls will be at Meridian Friday and return home to host the Boise Braves Saturday.

"I hate these kind of games," Coach John Astorquia says. "Both Meridian and Boise have the kind of records that make the kids feel like they should win. But if they don't play well, both could get them. It's like that Bonneville game. They were shorter, not as deep and, I didn't think, as good a team as the Bruins but they scared the heck out of us. We were lucky to get away with the win."

"We're still lacking in mental toughness to win those close games," he said refering to last weekend's overtime loss to Borah. "We're five and three and with the toughness just to make free throws we would be 7-1.

"I told the kids after that Borah game that not only did they not bury the knife in Borah late in the game when they had the chance, they gave Borah the knife and let Borah stab us. Even though we came through and beat Nampa, we had our chances to do it going away in the last four minutes."

"What we need are a couple of big wins, I think," he continued. "If we could blow someone out by 25 points or so, it might be the confidence thing we need to win the close ones."

Meridian has proved it can be dangerous. The Warriors knocked off Minico, which demolished Twin Falls. The Warriors are coached by Don Haynes, former Bruin mentor, and he likes a fast-tempo game. If he can establish the pace and get his break working, his teams can score tremendously well.

Meridian's major problem is it has no one over 6-3. Parks is the top gun.

Boise similarly isn't tall and has had problems scoring. But Greg Hordemann always has had a history of developing talent-shallow teams into spoilers as the season progresses.

Minico basically has two problems, 6-9 Dale Wilkinson and 6-7 Larry Tobler. They could be enough to offset the tandem one-two punch of 6-7 Quin Hepworth and 6-5 Bob Brice. Highland's supporting cast is not great, however.

Mat match

KIMBERLY — The Kimberly wrestlers will entertain the Valley Vikings in a dual meet at 7 p.m. Thursday in the Bulldog gymnasium.

Murtaugh carries only undefeated boast into second half of season

MAGIC VALLEY — With the season at its midpoint, Magic Valley has just one undefeated team remaining — the Murtaugh Red Devils — and the question arises about who is going to stop them.

The Red Devils, packing a 10-0 record, will be at Raft River Friday night in a Magic Valley Conference game.

Murtaugh balances good but not overpowering size underneath in Buckley and Bates and senior guard Jack Andersen is developing into a fine floor general.

Since the Red Devils probably won't see another team taller and certainly won't run into a guard who can bottle up Andersen, it appears only the matter of the "off night" or two stands between them and the league title.

Of course, as coach Berry Berg knows, there are five teams who might take exception to that.

It should prove a big weekend in the Northside Conference, particularly for Camas County. The Mushers currently are running undefeated with Richfield while Carey, losing its first two outings, probably is in a spoiler role already.

Those are the two Camas County faces. The Mushers will entertain Carey Friday night and travel to Richfield Saturday. Richfield Coach Heber Kirkland has his Tigers running and scoring very well.

Similarly the Gooding Senators are on a hard spot. The Senators have to travel to Buhl Friday night in the four-team SCIC. Gooding lost a tight one to Jerome last week and two losses in such a small conference usually is fatal. Especially when everyone has picked Buhl to win it going away and the Indians haven't played a league game yet.

Burley will leave the area for the weekend. Coach Ron Gillett will take his Kelly Davis-oiled scoring machine to Blackfoot Friday and Rigby Saturday. Both count in the Cross State Conference.

The Bobcats have lost only one league game and are in the running for the league title for sure. Blackfoot is rather an unknown quantity while Rigby isn't. The Trojans have lost to two Magic Valley teams depsite returning five of the top seven men from last year's A-2 state championship team. Defensive pressure on the guards has killed Rigby.

So one can safely assume exactly what Rigby spend the holiday vacation time working on.

Jerome, which has rebounded from four straight opening losses to win three times and lead the SCIC, will be at Mountain Home. Basically Jerome has turned it around with defense. They have held their last three opponents to 115 points — less than 40 per game average.

In the Canyon Conference, the two undefeated teams, Shoshone and Filer, will collide at 7 p.m. at the College of Southern Idaho gymnasium. It will be the first of a doubleheader with CSI meeting the ISU jayvees in the nightcap.

It should be a good matchup. Shoshone will have an overall height edge underneath although Filer will have the tallest in 6-7 Jay Decker. The guards are about the same size and possess pretty good quickness. Shoshone's mainstay has been 6-4 senior Jason Webb who plays everywhere offensively.

Declo takes its steadily improving defensive record to Wendell when the Trojans will be taller but will have to adjust to continuous harassment. In the other league game, Kimberly, seeking its first loop win, will be at Glenns Ferry in a rematch. The pilots won the first game in overtime.

The Magic Valley Conference offers another key game with the Oakley Hornets traveling to Hagerman. Hagerman currently tops the league with a 2-0 record, one-half game ahead of unbeaten Murtaugh and Oakley. The loser will have a tough time getting back into a three-team race unless someone helps along the way.

Hansen will be at Castleford in a match of conference winless teams.

On Saturday, Wood River will travel to Gooding for an SCIC game while Caldwell brings the Cross State banner into Jerome. Shoshone stays on the southside to meet the Bulldogs at Kimberly while Glenns Ferry moves into Valley.

Wendell will be at Filer while Camas County keeps that date at Richfield. In a non-league game, Carey travels to Oakley.

Dirt bike won't stop Neely's retirement again — he sold it

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — The first time Ralph Neely planned to retire, his intentions were ruined by a nasty spill from a dirt bike.

The year was 1971 and the Dallas Cowboys were driving toward their first Super Bowl championship after losing to Baltimore in overtime the year before. Neely, the Cowboys' All-Pro left tackle, intended to give up football for a job with a firm in New York following the season. Then came the moment that changed everything.

"November 1, 1971 at 5 p.m., I was laying on the side of a hill in Dallas with a dislocated ankle and broken leg," Neely said Wednesday. "The bike went down. I sold it and haven't been on one since. That's when I stopped being a dreamer and became a realist."

A clause in the standard NFL contract Neely wasn't aware of at the time cost him $35,000 in salary because the injury was not related to football. He also lost $50,000 in the stock market, which had a rough year, too. All of a sudden, retiring didn't look so good.

"It was an economic decision, not a sentimental thing to go back and win the big one," Neely said.

This time, his financial condition and future secure, Neely promises his decision is final. The Cowboys' Super Bowl meeting Sunday against the Denver Broncos for the NFL title will cap Neely's outstanding 13-year professional career. It also will be his last chance to be on a winning Super Bowl team after playing in Dallas losses in 1971 and '76.

That it's his last game, however, won't be much on his mind.

"When I'm out there I won't be thinking this is my last game," Neely said. "The only thing I'll be thinking about is doing my job. Otherwise a guy by the name of Lyle Alzado may take advantage of me. If I have any kind of special feelings it's that I've never participated in a winning Super Bowl."

Because he carefully planned for the years after football, the 34-year-old Neely is not worried about a future without the game he's played all his life.

"I'm looking forward to that other life out there," he said. "I'm not sad about retiring. I'm happy I accomplished what I have and glad I have a job to go to. To play 13 years in the NFL, all with the same team with the class of Dallas and to be in the playoffs 12 of those 13 years, there's nothing to be sad about."

After the season Neely will begin working full-time as vice president in charge of southern development, for a company that builds courts for racquetball, one of the fastest growing sports in the country. Neely worked the past four off-seasons for a computer company owned by Cowboys owner Clint Murchison.

Neely, a two-time All-America at Oklahoma, said the high point of his career was the feeling in the locker room after Dallas beat San Francisco in the 1970 NFC championship game to reach its first Super Bowl. But the performance he remembers most came in his second year when he went against Willie Davis in the Cowboys' 34-27 loss to Green Bay in the 1966 NFL title game.

"I was young and Willie Davis was in his prime. He was the Harvey Martin or Lyle Alzado of his day," Neely said. "I had a super game, almost flawless. I really did. He said I was the finest offensive tackle he ever played against."

Neely thinks this year's Super Bowl, like the one years ago when Dallas lost to Pittsburgh 20-17, will be a close game.

"We've been here a lot, sure, and Denver has never been here," he said. "But they have our respect and I'm not just saying that. They're a damn fine football team."

Morton looks improved

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — Denver quarterback Craig Morton took part in all offensive drills Wednesday and seemed to be working without much discomfort.

Coach Red Miller said Morton's hip and thigh muscle condition was progressing well and plans to give him his full turn in practice from now on. Morton received took regular treatment after practice.

John Grant, the backup middle guard who missed Tuesday's work with a case of flu, was in sweats but not pads and did minimal work. However, Miller said he would be in pads for Thursday's workout.

At the Dallas workout, only one member of the Cowboys failed to participate during the hour and three-quarters practice session. Tight end Jay Saldi is still bothered with a leg problem but Coach Tom Landry said he anticipated his return on Thursday.

Linebacker Tom Henderson, who had been bothered with a sore side, was back in uniform and engaged in the full practice, as did cornerback Mark Washington, who has recovered from an attack of the flu. Landrey said a similar workout was planned for Thursday.

Romanian boxer seeks asylum

SOUTH LAKE TAHOE, Calif. (UPI) — Mircea Simon, an Olympic medalist for the Romanian boxing team who defected while touring the United States, was granted political asylum Wednesday.

Simon, who defected Monday, was granted asylum by David Ilchert, regional director of the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service in San Francisco.

A heavyweight who won a silver medal in the 1976 Olympics at Montreal, Simon lost a bout Saturday during Rumanian-U.S. competition at nearby Stateline, Nev. The Americans won seven of 11 matches.

Thomas Laughlin, chief of the Immigration Service in Sacramento, said Simon told investigators that "he has no personal freedom. His life is dictated to him" by the Romanian government.

Simon told them that "as a youth he showed promise as a boxer and he was conscripted into the Army and the only thing he ever does is box."

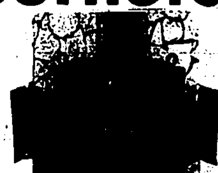

Laughlin said Simon contacted the FBI Monday and told agents he defected.

He said the information was forwarded to the State Department in Washington, but that the regional director granted asylum based on information at hand.

Major powers claim enough votes for win

ATLANTA (UPI) — The major college football powers believe they will have six more votes than they need Thursday when the NCAA takes up a proposal aimed at giving them control of their own athletic purse strings.

"We've been checking around and our best information shows we have 85 votes at the moment," said a representative of one of the nation's most successful football schools. "We need 79 and if I had to make a prediction right now I'd say we are going to win.

"Our big problem now is to keep some of those votes from slipping away in the next 24 hours. There is a lot of pressure being exerted from both sides and there are some schools which aren't as firm as we would like."

The controversial proposal would divide the current NCAA Division I into two subdivisions for football, placing the nearly 80 schools which want to finance big-time programs into Division I-A and allowing that group to set its own ecoomic standards.

The NCAA begins the official business session of its week-long meeting in Atlanta Thursday morning and the reorganization proposal, listed 27th among 161 items on the agenda, is expected to come to a vote by early afternoon.

There was heated debate Wednesday when a Division I roundtable discussed the issue with Athletic Director Bob Murphy of San Jose State, which presently does not meet the criteria proposed for I-A membership, repeating his earlier charge that the reorganization plan would make about 60 present Division I members "second class citizens."

"I think we have the votes to carry it," said Southeastern Conference Commissioner Boyd Whorter, who has been a leading proponent of the measure.

"I think the vote can go either way," said Mid-American Conference Commissioner Fred Jacoby, one of the leaders of the opposition.

Phillip Shiver, president of Miami University, drew applause from about half of the delegates attending the roundtable Wednesday when he charged the NCAA deliberately bypassed its own Reclassification Committee in presenting the reorganization plan.

"I am a member of that committee and we have not discussed this matter since June 1976 when we issued a report stating we were opposed to restructuring because we did not feel it was in the best interest of college athletics," said Shiver.

However, Arizona's Lew Myers, chairman of that committee, said adjustments have been made since that report was drawn up 19 months ago.

"At that time, we didn't have objective criteria to work with," said Myers. "We do have that now and I, for one, feel that changes the situation."

Cecil Coleman of Illinois said the NCAA is simply trying to correct a mistake it made four years ago when it divided into three divisions and allowed schools which either are unable or unwilling to finance big-time football to be in the same division with those which want to stay on that course.

"Divisions in the NCAA are nothing new," said Coleman. "We've had these, in one form or another, for more than 30 years. All we are trying to do here this week is redefine these separations."

Murphy says the major powers will use the current proposal as a stepping stone to even more restrictive division in the future.

"I heard talk at a cocktail party Tuesday night that you won't hear on the floor of this convention," said Murphy. "I heard people talking about cutting down to just the top 40 in the future and maybe even less than that.

"The football powers are just being greedy," charged Murphy. "They already have most of the television money and all of the bowl money. Now, they want even more."

NCAA Executive Director Walter Byers said that those schools which would be relegated to the lower I-AA classification would still get a share of the television revenue. But, he admitted that this has not been worked out yet with ABC, which has a contract to televise college football for the next four years.

"We haven't been able to get into that yet because we do not know how many schools will select to be in I-AA," said Byers. "But I'm convinced that we will have television coverage for I-AA teams and, further, if we have I-AA playoffs as is being proposed, the television people tell me at least three of those games will be added."

Murphy contended that those schools which do not now qualify for I-A membership would have a difficult time getting reclassified.

"The criteria was rigged," said Murphy. "It will be almost impossible for any school that can't meet that criteria now to do so later because scheduling would be such a large stumbling block."

Kansas drops Oklags

STILLWATER, Okla. (UPI) — Donnie Von Moore scored 14 points and three other Jayhawks finished in double figures Wednesday night to give 10th-ranked Kansas a 69-57 victory over Oklahoma State.

Kansas, undefeated in Big Eight play, used its zone defense effectively and forced the Cowboys to take long-range shots.

Kansas' largest lead of the game was 14 points, both early and midway through the second half. OSU closed the gap to nine with 3:15 left, but could not get any closer.

John Douglas had 12 points and Darnell Valentine and Clint Johnson 10 each for Kansas. The Cowboys' Mark Tucker led all scorers with 16

Buff stuns Nebraska

BOULDER, Colo. (UPI) — Jack Tuz and Emmett Lewis connected on six straight free throws and field goals with just over seven minutes to play Wednesday night to power Colorado to a 23-64 upset over 15th-ranked Nebraska.

Brian Johnson led Colorado with 16 points while Lewis had 15. Carl McPipe and Brian Banks paced the Cornhuskers with 14 points each.

Nebraska, which dropped to 12-2 on the season and 1-1 in the Big Eight Conference, trailed early but came back to grab a 33-30 halftime lead. The Huskers pulled to a nine-point margin early in the second half before Colorado went ahead on two free throws by Johnson.

Bowling deadline set

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls Women's Bowling Association will hold its annual city tournament at the Twin Falls Bowladrome on Kimberly Road.

Closing date to sign up for the tournament is Jan. 16. For further information call the Bowladrome.

Georgia shocks Tech

ATHENS, Ga. (UPI) — Mark Slonaker hit four free throws in the final 30 seconds Wednesday night to lift Georgia to a 68-64 upset victory over Georgia Tech.

The Bulldogs jumped out to a 4-0 lead less than a half minute into the game and built up a 24-14 margin on the strength of 10 points by 6-7 forward Curtis Jackson. Georgia was ahead 33-26 at the half.

The Bulldogs kept control through the first 10 minutes of the second half, but Tech began forcing turnovers and, with 6:23 left, tied the score at 53-53.

N.C. State tops Maryland

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — Charles "Hawkeye" Whitney scored 18 points and Tony Warren 17 as North Carolina State used a tight zone defense to hold off Maryland for an 88-82 Atlantic Coast Conference victory Wednesday night.

The 18th-ranked Wolfpack, after leading most of the game, broke a 74-74 tie with 7:30 left on a basket by freshman Kenny Matthews. They stretched the lead to 80-74 on a pair of field goals by Warren and Clyde Austin, who finished with 12 points. The Terps narrowed the gap to two points on two free throws by Larry Gibson and a long jumper by Bill Bryant with 2:30 remaining.

Iowa St. upsets K-State

AMES, Iowa (UPI) — Andrew Parker's 27-points helped carry Iowa State to an 82-77 upset of defending Big Eight champion Kansas State Wednesday night.

Despite only nine turnovers by Kansas State and a 56 percent shooting average by the Wildcats, Iowa State managed to hold on for the victory and raise its record to 7-7. The Cyclones hit 59 percent of their shots from the floor and lifted their conference record to 2-0.

Syracuse nips Penn St.

UNIVERSITY PARK, Pa. (UPI) — Ninth-ranked Syracuse reeled off 21 points — eight by Marty Byrnes — during a six-minute span late in the fourth quarter Wednesday night to come from behind and defeat upset-minded Penn State, 83-77.

The Orangemen had taken a 39-29 halftime lead and were up 45-37 with 17 minutes remaining when Penn State, 5-8, hit for 13 straight points to take the lead, 50-45, with 13:06 left.

It was then that the Syracuse scored the 21 points to the Nittany Lions' four to make it 66-54 with less than seven minutes to play and put the game out of reach.

Ross Kindel led Syracuse with 19 points, while Byrnes finished up with 14, Hal Cohen and Louis Orr 12 apiece and Dale Shackleford 11. A career-high 27 points by forward Steve Kuhn paced the Nittany Lions.

Duke whips Clemson

CLEMSON, S.C. (UPI) — Sophomore Mike Gminski poured in 28 points Wednesday night to lead Duke to a 107-85 thrashing of Clemson in an Atlantic Coast Conference game.

Freshman Eugene Banks had 23 points and Jim Spannarkel 20. Colon Abraham had 14 points to lead Clemson.

Duke led at halftime 46-43.

The Blue Devils ran off 12 straight points at the outset of the second half to go ahead 57-45. The closest Clemson came to Duke after that was nine points during the remainder of the game.

Carnesecca wins 200th

JAMAICA, N.Y. (UPI) — Coach Lou Carnesecca gained his 200th career victory Wednesday night and transfer Reggie Carter made his debut and scored 19 points as the Redmen trounced Fordham 97-56.

St. John's, now 10-4, was led by forward George Johnson's 21 points and 8 rebounds while guard Gordon Thomas had 14 points on 7-for-8 shooting.

The Redmen owned a 40-20 halftime lead and coasted through the second half in a lopsided game.

Forward Tom Cavanaugh led Fordham, 4-9, with 16 points.

Broncos thrive on Super bowl 'pressure'

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — The Dallas Cowboys feel they must cope with pressure. The Denver Broncos say they live with it all the time.

"There's great pressure here," said Dallas Coach Tom Landry Wednesday before sending his Cowboys through a workout in preparation for Sunday's Super Bowl game against the Broncos. "You don't realize until the day of the game just how much pressure. It all comes down on you the last couple of days. It all builds up. Right now it feels like it does at this stage of the week during the season, but it will change. Every day you get to feel the pressure more and on Sunday it reaches its peak.

"There is no game that is as great a pressure game as this one. You only have to make one error and it's magnified tremendously. Two years ago against Pittsburgh, we made one serious error — we had a punt blocked — and it cost us the game."

This is Landry's fourth Super Bowl, so he must qualify as somewhat of an expert since no team has ever gone more times.

But Denver's Red Miller, in his first NFL championship game, has different feelings.

"Our team has been in training for this type of thing," Miller said. "We've had weird type things happen to us all season. I don't think our concentration will be hurt or more pressure put upon us because it's a Super Bowl. We like people around. We think we can get things done no matter what.

"We don't feel any pressure. People say we're not playoff-hardened. But Pittsburgh and Oakland were Super Bowl champions, and that was supposed to give them an advantage, but we beat them both, and we're the ones who are here ready to play for the Super Bowl.

"They made the mistakes, not us. Pressure won't be a factor. If Dallas is better than us, then they'll win. But we'll play our game and nothing is going to bother us. I don't think the situation here will change the way we play the game."

Landry admitted that Denver, in its underdog role, would be the popular choice.

"The American people sentimentally are for the underdogs," he explained. "We were the underdogs for a long time and naturally we built a big following. That changes, though.

"I was even pulling for the Broncos to win. Denver has caught the fancy of people around the country. Craig Morton and Jim Jensen played for me in Dallas and I'd like to see them be successful in Denver."

Miller said Landry even spoke to his Broncos after Dallas defeated Denver in the final game of the season.

"I don't really know him that well," Miller said. "But after the game, he came into our dressing room and said a few words to our players. He wished them good luck and said he was pulling for them to go all the way."

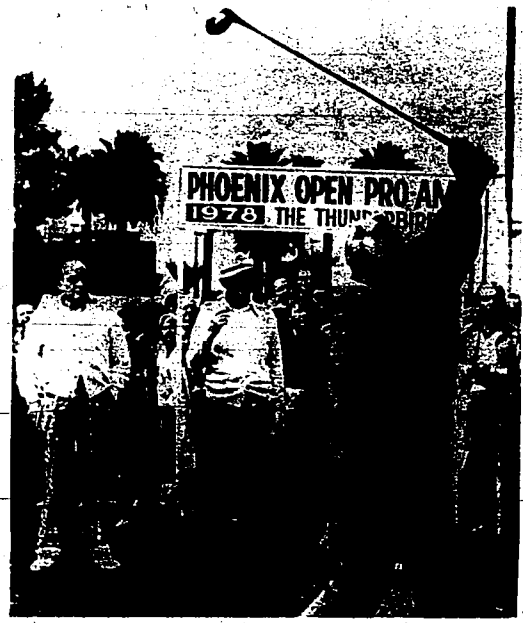

Miller said he expects to win but Landry was more tentative.

"I'm happy to be here, but it doesn't end there," Miller said. "I want to win and I expect to win. I expect to win every game we go into. I like us to play with a lot of emotion, try to make things happen. One of our slogans is that the fourth quarter should belong to us.

"We have had a good season but this is what you point for. I think we're a pretty good team. I don't use the word great. Pretty good is darn good for me."

"I think its a tossup," said Landry. "In 1971, people asked me if I though we would beat Miami and I said that I did. I don't have the same feeling. That Cowboys' team was a veteran, disciplined team. They had their share of disappointments, and I knew they would play a great game. Also, Miami was an up and coming team but not as good as they became in the next few years."

The Cowboys remained five-point favorites to defeat the Broncos.

Palmer returns

DRIVING Arnold Palmer, absent from the Phoenix Open for 10 years, returned Wednesday to play in the pro am with Bob Hope, left, and Robert Goldwater.

Palmer plans to play more

PHOENIX (UPI) — Arnold Palmer, still golf's biggest attraction even though he no longer is a big threat, plans to play "a little more" this year than last, which is in direct contrast to Jack Nicklaus, the game's reputed king who, if he plays any less, might as well go into retirement.

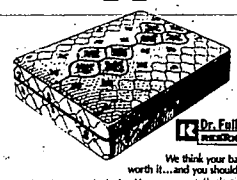

Palmer is in the field for the $200,000 Phoenix Open, which starts on Thursday, and is committed to play next week in the Bing Crosby National ProAm, the Hawaiian Open the following week and the Bob Hope Desert Classic at Palm Springs Feb. 8.

That's four tournaments in five weeks and there is a chance Arnie may play in the Los Angeles Open as well. That event follows the Hope and concludes the so-called West Coast Winter Tour.

Last year, Palmer played in 20 events, two more than Nicklaus, who has announced he will play even less in 1978. Jack might wind up playing in as few as 13 events and 15 at the very most.

"I don't know how many tournaments I'll play in this year," Palmer said Wednesday.

Snowmobiles end hibernation

To the cross country skier, it's just a noisy?? Machine; to the down hill skier, it's another rich man's toy, but to the true enthusiast, the snowmobile is pure fun, sport and recreation.

"Up until snowmobiles came along, you could cither ski or sit by the fire during the winter," Magic Valley Snowmobilers club member Jim Wood said. "It's a sport and those who haven't tried it, don't know what they're missing," Wood stressed.

Apparently the "sport" has caught on in the past 10 years because companies selling snowmobiles have mushroomed from one or two in the valley in 1966 to nearly 30 now.

The use of the snowmobile is a relatively new thing here but the machines have been in use since the 1920's.

"Companies started to mass produce the machines at the beginning of the 1960's", Gem Equipment Sales Manager Jeff Scott explained. "They were mostly home made jobs up to then," he commented.

The mass production of the machines has put the snowmobiles in the garages and driveways of several thousand valley residents right beside the boats and motorcycles.

"We have between 60 and 70 families who are members of the Club," Wood said of the Snowmobilers Club. "We mainly get together and do things as a group. The main thing is that we are family oriented," he added.

The fact thaat snowmobiling is a family thing is evident to anyone who heads south toward Magic Mountain any Saturday and Sunday.

Snowmobilers and their farfilies jam the parking lot to the tune of over 300 cars on the good day.

The traffic jam doesn't seem to bother the snowmobilers, Wood said, but the snow conditions are the hindering factor in how many people get out to enjoy the sport.

"Last year there just about wasn't any," Wood said of snowmobile conditions. "Some people tried to take their machines out but ended up damaging them."

Scott backed Wood about the damage. "Snowmobiles are made for running on snow and nothing else and when they are run on rocks or brush, there can be a lot of damage." He added that there were quite a few damaged machines last year.

Conditions this year are a little better, Wood said but they are still far from ideal, at least in the South Hills.

"That's where most of us (club members) go," he added.

After the trip up Rock Creek Canyon where all you see is the shrubs and trees at the side of the road, it is a pleasure and a thrill to travel to the tops of the nearby mountains for spectacular panoramic view.

"Some people never get more than four or five miles from the parking lot," Wood said. "But sometimes, we travel 30 or 35 miles and never cross our own trail."

Traveling is what the machines are made for but there are several opinions which areas are the best to travel in.

Wood says his group does most of its snowmobiling in the south hills but he did say they occasionally go to the Smiley Creek Lodge for a day of fun up north.

"The conditions haven't been ideal in the south hills so far this year," Wood said. However, snow conditions and depths for the Sun Valley area are excellent for the machines.

Snowmobilers waited and waited and waited last year for the snow to come but nothing happened. This year, the snow is deep and the conditions are excellent and the machines are out enmasse.

Racing: expensive adventure

If leisurly riding through the hills on a snowmobile is not quite your bag and you long for a little more adventure, try your hand at racing.

But if that's your option, be prepared to empty your wallet.

For full blown oval track racing with a factory machine, the cost could go as high as $5,000. That's just the machine, not to mention the entrance fees, travel costs and lodging.

One Magic Valley resident has taken that route and has been more than successful at it.

Gary Nelson of Hollister was named the Outstanding Snowmobiler of the Year recently for the State of Idaho and has an enviable record of winning two racing classes last year.

Those achelvements are impressive but when you realize that the closest race track is in Idaho Falls or McCall, travel becomes a factor.

Nelson has been to races in Canada, Wyoming, Montana plus racing in Bonners Ferry last weekend.

Cross Country racing continues to be popular and one of the main reasons is the investment is not as high as it is for oval racing.

Cross Country racing can be done on a stock, dealer showroom machine which can cost as little as $1,400. But for some, the sky is the limit.

If Idaho Falls or McCall or Canada or anywhere else is too far to travel, a snowmobile race was planned at the Thunderbluffs Speedway south of Twin Falls for this month. Mother nature was the only limiting factor, though. The snow has come but won't stick.

There have been several snowfalls to cover the track but it hasn't stayed. The result is the racers are doing a lot of what they do best, pray for the best.

Nordic skiing

Q: MY HUSBAND AND I LIKE TO TAKE OFF SUNDAYS AND DRIVE TO THE MANY BEAUTIFUL AREAS IN IDAHO THAT SURROUND US. WE'D LOVE TO JUST PACK OUR SKIS AND LUNCH AND WHEN WE SEE A PRETTY SPOT START SKI TOURING. ANY SUGGESTIONS?

A: Yes, before you ski tour any unmarked paths check in with your nearest ski touring center or Forest Service station asking where to ski. In some areas there are avalanche dangers or other hazards. The Forest Service usually has maps and the people there can direct you where to ski and inform you of snow conditions. Sign in. Tell them where you are going and check in on your return. I have had so many requests about where to tour in the Ketchum-Sun Valley area that I decided this year to write a tour book describing many trails that I think you would enjoy. If you would like a copy send $3 postage paid to Box 272, Sun Valley Post Office 83353 and I would be glad to forward it to you.

Q: HOW IS IT THAT CROSS COUNTRY HAS BECOME SO POPULAR IN THE LAST THREE OR FOUR YEARS? I NEVER HAVE HEARD OF IT BEFORE THEN.

A: I feel the American people in the past three or four years have become more interested in their health that they do it for exercise as well as pleasure. I think more people want to get away from the crowd. They want to follow a little creek or river and spend a beautiful day soaking in nature and the winter sun, maybe even take a few pictures or paint. It is a natural winter sport for the summer backpackers, joggers and hikers.

Maybe the most important reason is expense. Alpine is very expensive both for equipment and lift tickets whereas the cross country package comes in just a little over $100.00 and you are your own ski lift. Finally it is a family sport. You don't have to be an athlete to ski all together. Mother can pack a lunch and parents and children can go at their own pace. I like to think the family that plays together stays together!

Q: DO YOU THINK THAT BIKE PATHS OF THE SUMMER WILL BE CROSS COUNTRY TRACKS OF THE WINTER?

A: I am excited about the future of the bike paths and hiking trails. The Forest Service has been and is preparing more and more trails that can be used for hiking and cross country. We see only the tip of the iceberg now. As for bike paths I am sure the path that is planned between Ketchum and Hailey that is 13 miles in length will be used in the winter for skiing just as we see skiers going between Ketchum and Sun Valley. In Magic Valley, wherever there is enough snow and a path, mark my words, there will be skiers.

Q: WHAT DO YOU THINK OF WOOD SKIS VS. FIBERGLASS?

A: I am very sentimental about wood skies. The smell of pine tar on my handmade wood skis brings back my boyhood in Sweden but the fact remains that fiberglass is so much stronger and faster and has a built in camber that does not have to be blocked like wood. (Camber is the bow that you see when you put the bottom of the two skis together.) Wood skis must be blocked to keep their camber and kept away from heat lest they warp. If you race, fibergalss is better. You no longer see wooden skis in racing. The last Olympics I was involved in was in Sapporo, Japan. It was the last year they used wooden skis. In 1974, fiberglass was used for the first time for the world championship races in Sweden. It was a big shock at first: Not it's old shoe or should I say...old ski.

If you have wooden skis, hold onto them. They are marveious on powder and if you prefer to convert to fiberglass keep them for a conversation piece. With the collecting mania going on in the U.S., they will rank with first edition Batman comics, Shirley Temple drinking cups and old beer cans and probably end up worth far more than you paid for them.

Q: IS EXERCISE IN COLD WEATHER A STRAIN ON THE HEART? WOULD I BE BETTER OFF INDOORS EXERCISING ON A BIKE?

A: No, the main problem of working out in cold weather is not the heart rate but the chilling of extremities. Cross country skiing produces so much body heat that you have to layer your clothes so you can remove them as you heat up. Your feet, hands and head must be protected. You should wear a hat that covers your ears. Thirty per cent of your body heat is lost with an uncovered head. The heart rate elevates with heat. For every degree above 98.6 the heart rate goest up 10 beats a minute. The reason is the extra pumping is needed for cooling the skin. If it is very hot and humid, the exercise specialists at the Sun Valley Health Institute recommend not exercising until the cool of the evening.

Skiing seniors ask why wait to learn

EAST TROY, Wis. — A fellow who foolishly waited until he was 40 before stepping into his first pair of ski boots can't help but feel envious watching youngsters scoot down the slopes.

Those were the years when winter was a time to be endured — not enjoyed.

Those moments pass, though, and it's seldom wise to look back with envy — regretting all those wasted years. It's far more sensible to make the most of today and anticipate the pleasures of tomorrow.

That's precisely what Bill Orr, 66, and Harold Spurgeon, 60, did when they began skiing.

Orr, of East Troy, was introduced to the sport when he was 46. Spurgeon, of Rockford, Ill., strapped on his first set of skis only 10 years ago. Despite late starts, both are instructors at Alpine Valley equally pleased and adept to teach newcomers — adults or youngsters.

"I've been instructing at Alpine for the past eight winters," says Orr. He squeezes in four days a week even though he continues as chairman of the board of the Uster Corp. in Milwaukee — a concern that manufactures kitchen appliances — that he headed until his retirement a year ago.

"It's really fun to teach older adults who didn't think they had it in them.

"Not even cold weather turns me or my students off. I just keep moving and tell the classes to do the same. The secret is to wear several layers of clothes and to stay out of the wind."

Orr also gets a kick out of introducing youngsters to the sport and preparing to take his 4-year-old grandchild under his wing.

Spurgeon devoted only two years to mastering on-slope techniq es before enticing Alpine ski director Betty Kroll into adding nim to her staff.

"I don't think I've ever felt better or been happier," he says. "There's no problem in finding time to hit the slopes, even though I put in a full schedule as a sales rep for General Foods. I do most of my teaching on weekends, anyhow.

"It's especially gratifying to teach the over-50 crowd. I feel that I can relate to them, because I didn't learn the sport until late in life."

Neither Orr nor Spurgeon can claim the title of Alpine Valley's resident senior citizen. That belongs to Dan Daubert, a 75-year-old g, fter from Racine, Wis., who waited until he was 63 before he began skiing.

"I just want to enjoy myself," he explains. "I never thought that I'd be skiing at my age. But, one day Betty Kroll told me she'd guarantee that I could learn so I took a lesson from her and have been on my own ever since. I'm having a ball.

"Other old-folks ought to try it too. They shouldn't worry about falling.

"Heck, the hardest spills that I take are on ice when I'm walking around my neighborhood. At least, on the slopes, the instructors teach you how to fall and how to get up."

Daubert stays in shape for skiing by following a regular walking-jogging routine and thinks "I can keep going until I'm at least 80, unless my ticker begins to act up."

The three "seniors" often are joined on the slopes by Jack Briner, 64, of Brown Deer, Wis., but maintain he's not a true late-floomer. "He cheated because he got started in skiing when he was about 21," Daubert says, grinning.

"It doesn't make any difference when you start, though," insists Briner. "I'd like to see more women in our age bracket take up the sport. Some do, because their husbands get involved. But, that's not a good enough reason. They ought to want to ski for the sheer enjoyment that's out there waiting for them."

TWIN FALLS — Snowmobilling conditions in the Sawtooth National Forest are excellent, according to the Forest Service Office.

Avalanche danger in areas above Ketchum-Sun Valley is still present but last week's avalanche warning has been discontinued.

Conditions for snowmobiling and cross country skiing in the Twin Falls range district are rated good to excellent but snowmovilers are advised to check with ranger stations for specific areas closed to the machines.

Areas around ski areas and cross country ski trails are closed to snowmobiling but the other areas are nearly wide open.

The area breakdown for snowmobile conditions are as follows: Burley, Howell Canyon has three to seven feet of snow. The parking lot has been cleared and weekday snowmobiling should be best with weekends congested. Elba pass area is very good with three to four feet of snow. There is approximately three inches of new snow in the south hills and snow depth is about two and one half feet. Snowmobiling should be excellent.

In Fairfield District, snowmobiling conditions should be very good. The Snowmobile elk closure went into effect Tuesday and snowmobilers should check with ranger stations for specific closed areas. There is a new snowmobile area at Cat Creek Summit with a parking area, shelter and rest rooms.

Ketchum-Sun Valley areas should be very good for snowmobiling with some settling of the snow taking place. The snow is also quite soft.

The Stanley area is excellent with two inches of new snow. Parking areas along Highway 21 are being plowed. There are four feet of snow at Cape Horn and six feet at Galena.

The route from Grandjean to Stanley on the highway is dangerous because of avalanches and the Clear Creek, Bear Valley route would be better.

FORECAST FOR FRIDAY, JANUARY 13, 1978

GENERAL TENDENCIES: There is apt to be some confusion and muddled thinking now, so avoid what can be deceptive and fraudulent. Later, a whole new series of conditions comes into being by which you can advance to a much better life with more prosperity.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) You get a puzzling communication early but ignore it; do not take it seriously. Try to be of assistance to friends and relatives. Increase own happiness.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Don't permit a monetary affair to disturb you now since later you can see how best to handle it. An expert can be of great assistance if you consult him.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) You are not in a good mood. Take time to improve your appearance and your feeling of well-being. Seek company of good friends.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Conditions are rather trying for you but be philosophical and all works out to your benefit. Don't forget to pay important bills.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) A new contact is disappointing, but a good friend comes to your aid. Take no chances with one who is a fair weather friend.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Give attention to outside affairs that are important early, then plan other activities for later. Show you are a thoughtful person. Take no chances with reputation.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Study future plans and make revisions if you deem them necessary. If you have a trip in mind, make arrangements well in advance for best results.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Take care of promises you have made early, although it may be somewhat annoying. Then arrange other obligations intelligently. A loved one may be irritated but this condition soon passes.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) A new attitude toward some association matter brings good results. An outside affair can also be beneficial to you. Do whatever will bring you more happiness.

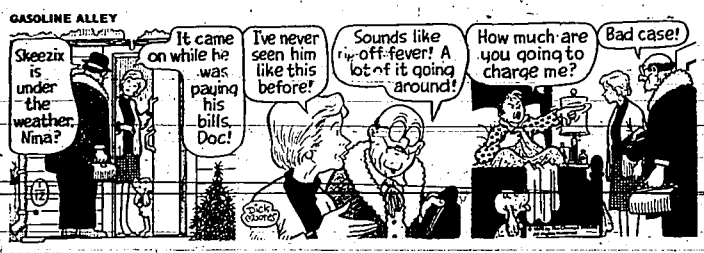

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Your work may seem annoying but if you persevere you can turn it into pleasure and gain benefits. Take treatments to improve health.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Get details of some social or fun affair worked out well. Take mate, loved one along for best results. Don't neglect important work you have to do.

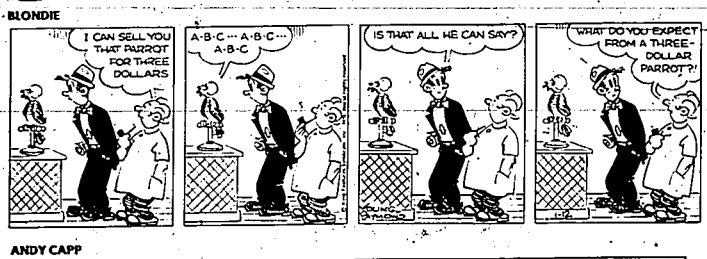

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Don't be so reticent at home since all works out nicely later. Study into every aspect of a new undertaking since this can bring you much benefit.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will be full of doubts if you do not give the right kind of ethical training. Be sure to do so and there will be a fine and upstanding person here. Slant education along business lines, especially dealing with property, real estate, building and the like.

what's what

L.M. Boyd

Associates of people who've killed themselves say many of same seem suddenly to have become uncaring and even contented shortly before they've done that thing. There are exceptions, but the upbeat mood change from melancholy occurs commonly enough to be noteworthy, even so. The crises experts now regard it as a powerful warning signal. It means they've let go, made up their minds, shut out all alternatives.

The big book at hand defines a "chef" as "a skilled male cook who manages a kitchen." Our Language man is trying to find out if there's a similar professional word to identify a skilled female cook who manages a kitchen. And if not, why not?

Was not a little girl who convinced Abraham Lincoln to grow a beard, as legend has it, but rather the Committee of New York Republicans.

Is it true that bats are the only mammals that can carry rabies without themselves dying of it?

FIRED

Q. "How many federal civil servants get fired on any given year for inefficiency or, as they say, 'cause'?"

A. Take 1976. Fewer than 3,500 were so let go. That's one-seventh of a single percent. Look at it this way. If a small business operator with 10 employees were to follow such a pattern, only one person would be fired from that private enterprise every 70 years.

Soldiers from 52 different countries were serving in the French Foreign Legion at last report. Client asks, therefore, if the Legion has regiments made up solely of Hungarians or Russians or Germans or Americans. No, it's the Legion's policy never to fill more than a third of a unit from squad to regiment with any one nationality.

GENES

You know how the sound of a fingernail scratching across a blackboard can give you a chill? Or if a shovel scrapes a rock just right, that might do it. Or maybe even the squeak of some certain color. Whatever, the science boys say not all people are so sensitive, and those who are probably inherited their sensitivity. It's in the genes, they now believe, this tendency to get goose pimples when you hear grating noises.

What percentage of its sales dollar volume do you figure the average American business can expect as profit? When pollsters put that query to a sizable sampling of college graduates, their concensus was 36 percent. They missed it somewhat, they did. It's actually 5 percent.
